Dresden Declaration on Biosphere Reserves and Climate Change

28 June 2011

We, the participants of the international conference "For life, for the future: Biosphere reserves and climate change", held in Dresden, Germany, on 27 and 28 June 2011, issue the following declaration:

Climate change mitigation, adaptation to climate change, and the conservation of biological diversity are among today's key environmental challenges. Rising to these challenges requires strong political commitment and decisive action worldwide. In many cases we already have the knowledge and technology to change our path of development. We must now mobilize our resources and creativity in order to further intensify action towards sustainable development, including changes in our behaviour.

The International Coordinating Council of UNESCO's Man and the Biosphere (MAB) Programme convened for the first time in 1971, and laid the foundations for a new type of conservation area - biosphere reserves. It declared the harmonious development of man and nature to be its key goal. The idea of biosphere reserves has met with growing approval worldwide, and over the past four decades has become a great success. Biosphere reserves represent a global network of model regions in which sustainable forms of use and options for adaptation to changing ecological, economic and social conditions may be tested, involving all stakeholders.

The world network of over 560 biosphere reserves in more than 100 countries, established within the framework of the MAB Programme, brings the wealth of experience gathered over 40 years in and with model regions for sustainable development to bear on climate change mitigation and adaptation, and is aimed at making a substantial contribution to these processes, as well as to the conservation of biological diversity. We expect current global climate protection measures also to satisfy the urgent needs of biodiversity conservation and the sustainable use of biodiversity.

Since its establishment, the MAB Programme has pursued innovative approaches in research, monitoring, education and capacity-building, and the management and implementation of model projects. These approaches go far beyond nature conservation, and are suitable as models for a sustainable way of life. Biosphere reserves are thus an important element of safeguarding a liveable earth for the future of generations to come.

Biosphere reserves are an effective instrument for mitigating climate change, and serve as models for adaptation to the impacts of such change. This applies particularly in the domains of sustainable land use, green economies, safeguarding ecosystem services, energy efficiency, and the use of renewable energies. Biosphere reserves are learning sites for sustainable development.

With reference to the goals of the Seville Strategy (1995) and the Madrid Action Plan (2008), the conference participants call on the States represented in the MAB Programme to give greater weight to biosphere reserves in their strategies on climate change mitigation and adaptation, and to transfer approaches developed in biosphere reserves to other regions.

On this basis, we consider the following measures to be required:

At policy level in Member States

(1) Place greater focus on the capacities of the MAB Programme and biosphere reserves for mitigating and adapting to the impacts of climate change, and for better integrating their contributions into national and international climate strategies and policies;

(2) Incorporate the idea of biosphere reserves into development cooperation to a greater degree, and support corresponding projects that link poverty eradication, biodiversity conservation and climate protection in developing countries;

(3) Establish adequate legislative, administrative and institutional frameworks at the national and/or local levels for biosphere reserves, endow such frameworks with appropriate competencies, and provide adequate funding and staff for the administration and operation of biosphere reserves;

(4) Further develop biosphere reserves as model regions for sustainable development, and disseminate good practices and experience gained as widely as possible;

(5) Support problem-oriented, interdisciplinary and applied research, monitoring and evaluation, including traditional knowledge, in relation to climate change and its impacts on biosphere reserves, and incorporate the outcomes of these activities into national and international research programmes and projects;

(6) Support innovative economic instruments and activities that combine climate change mitigation and adaptation with maintenance of the integrity of ecosystems and biodiversity as well as social development, including the needs of local and indigenous communities, in particular in the context of extraction of natural resources and the generation of energy;

(7) Promote the role of land use in carbon sequestration, in particular of forests by implementing and assessing the voluntary carbon programme REDD+ in biosphere reserves, to improve learning about impacts, markets, and practices, as well as to develop improved methodologies and to disseminate the lessons learned.
(8) Promote more easily understandable communication of the concept of biosphere reserves and the processes required for that purpose.

At the practical level in biosphere reserves

(9) Intensify efforts to develop innovative approaches to climate change mitigation and adaptation (including funding models), implement such approaches, adapt management plans accordingly and integrate them into existing sustainable development approaches, which should be used to strengthen the regions;

(10) Draw up and implement management plans to adapt to a changing climate, based on a vulnerability analysis, taking into account the conservation and sustainable use of biological diversity and involving the local population;

(11) Integrate traditional, indigenous and local knowledge and modern scientific findings to strengthen climate change research;

(12) Intensify efforts to use biosphere reserves as learning sites for sustainable development, which illustrate how biodiversity conservation sustains the flow of ecosystem services and supports the creation of economic opportunities;

(13) Further develop and reinforce international cooperation on the sharing of experience, effective methods, and joint projects – including in the framework of partnerships;

(14) Develop and strengthen partnerships with the private sector in order to identify, develop and promote local, national and international markets for sustainably produced products and services, and to advance climate-friendly economic practices in these areas;

At the UNESCO level

(15) Comprehensively support and use the MAB Programme and biosphere reserves, in line with the UNESCO Strategy for Action on Climate Change and the UNESCO Climate Change Initiative, not only as reference sites, for a better understanding of the impacts of climate change, in particular in regions specifically targeted by UNESCO, such as Africa and small island developing States (SIDS);

(16) Further develop the World Network of Biosphere Reserves as one of UNESCO's key assets: as reference regions for a better understanding of the impacts of climate change on human societies, cultural and biological diversity, ecosystem services, and the world's natural and cultural heritage, and consider including biosphere reserves in global, coordinated interdisciplinary research programmes on climate change;

(17) Foster international exchange of best practices, and promote South-South and North-South-South partnerships on technology sharing and best practices through twinning;

(18) Cooperate with other UNESCO and United Nations intergovernmental programmes and conventions, in particular the three Rio conventions, the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development (2005-2014), the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development Rio+20, and other relevant international and national organizations and agencies so that they make greater use of biosphere reserves as pilot regions for research, learning and sustainability processes;

(19) Support Member States politically and financially in the designation and successful management of new biosphere reserves, particularly transboundary reserves.

Conclusion

The conference participants call for the provision of adequate financial, organizational and staff capacities to implement the recommendations contained in this Declaration. The conference participants invite the International Coordinating Council of the MAB Programme to endorse this Declaration at its 23rd session, and to present it to the UNESCO General Conference at its 36th session in autumn 2011.

Recommendation on the Historic Urban Landscape

The General Conference,
Taking note of the final report on the elaboration of a standard-setting instrument on the historic urban landscape in the form of a recommendation (report – 36 C/23; recommendation – 36 C/23 Annex),
Recognizing the significance of the historic urban landscape approach as an innovative way to preserve heritage and manage historic cities,

1. Commends the international partner organizations that have contributed to the review process and supported UNESCO over the last six years in its task of establishing principles and guidelines for the conservation of the historic urban landscape in support of Member States and local communities;

2. Recommends that Member States take the appropriate steps to: adapt this new instrument to their specific contexts, disseminate it widely across their national territories, facilitate its implementation through the formulation and adoption of supporting policies, and monitor its impact on the conservation and management of historic cities;

3. Also recommends that Member States and relevant local authorities identify within their specific contexts the critical steps for implementing the historic urban landscape approach, which may include the following:
   (a) to undertake comprehensive surveys and mapping of the historic cities’ natural, cultural and human resources;
   (b) to reach consensus using participatory planning and stakeholder consultations on what values to protect for transmission to future generations, and to determine the attributes that bear these values;
   (c) to assess the vulnerability of such attributes to socio-economic pressures and the impacts of climate change;
   (d) to integrate urban heritage values and their vulnerability status into a wider framework of city development, which shall provide indications of areas of heritage sensitivity which require careful attention to planning, design and implementation of development projects;
   (e) to prioritize actions for conservation and development;
   (f) to establish the appropriate partnerships and local management frameworks for each of the projects identified for conservation and development, as well as to develop mechanisms for the coordination of the various activities between different actors, both public and private;

4. Decides to adopt the Recommendation on the Historic Urban Landscape, as approved on 27 May 2011 at the Intergovernmental Meeting of Experts on the Historic Urban Landscape (category II) at UNESCO Headquarters, which is annexed to this resolution.

ANNEX

Recommendation on the Historic Urban Landscape, including a glossary of definitions.

Preamble

The General Conference,

Considering that historic urban areas are among the most abundant and diverse manifestations of our common cultural heritage, shaped by generations and constituting a key testimony to humankind’s endeavours and aspirations through space and time,

Also considering that urban heritage is for humanity a social, cultural and economic asset, defined by an historic layering of values that have been produced by successive and existing cultures and an accumulation of traditions and experiences, recognized as such in their diversity,

Further considering that urbanization is proceeding on an unprecedented scale in the history of humankind, and that throughout the world this is driving socio-economic change and growth, which should be harnessed at the local, national, regional and international levels,

Recognizing, the dynamic nature of living cities,

Noting, however, that rapid and frequently uncontrolled development is transforming urban areas and their settings, which may cause fragmentation and deterioration to urban heritage with deep impacts on community values, throughout the world,

Considering, therefore, that in order to support the protection of natural and cultural heritage, emphasis needs to be put on the integration of historic urban area conservation, management and planning strategies into local development processes and urban planning, such as, contemporary architecture and infrastructure development, for which the application of a landscape approach would help maintain urban identity,

Also considering that the principle of sustainable development provides for the preservation of existing resources, the active protection of urban heritage and its sustainable management is a condition sine qua non of development,

Recalling that a corpus of UNESCO standard-setting documents, including conventions, recommendations and charters exists on the subject of the conservation of historic areas, all of which remain valid,

1 Resolution adopted on the report of the CLT Commission at the 17th plenary meeting, on 10 November 2011.
2 In particular, the 1972 Convention concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage, the 2005 Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions, the 1962 Recommendation concerning the Safeguarding of the Beauty and Character of Landscapes and Sites, the 1968 Recommendation concerning the Preservation of Cultural Property Endangered by Public or Private Works, the 1972 Recommendation concerning the Protection, at National Level, of the Cultural and Natural Heritage, the 1976 Recommendation concerning...
Also noting, however, that under processes of demographic shifts, global market liberalization and decentralization, as well as mass tourism, market exploitation of heritage, and climate change, conditions have changed and cities are subject to development pressures and challenges not present at the time of adoption of the most recent UNESCO recommendation on historic areas in 1976 (Recommendation concerning the Safeguarding and Contemporary Role of Historic Areas),

Further noting the evolution of the concepts of culture and heritage and of the approaches to their management, through the combined action of local initiatives and international meetings, 1 which have been useful in guiding policies and practices worldwide,

Desiring to supplement and extend the application of the standards and principles laid down in existing international instruments,

Having before it proposals concerning the historic urban landscape as an approach to urban heritage conservation, which appear on the agenda of the 36th session of the General Conference as item 8.1,

Having decided at its 35th session that this issue should be addressed by means of a recommendation to Member States,

1. Adopts, this 10th day of November 2011, the present Recommendation on the Historic Urban Landscape;

2. Recommends that Member States adopt the appropriate legislative institutional framework and measures, with a view to applying the principles and norms set out in this Recommendation in the territories under their jurisdiction;

3. Also recommends that Member States bring this Recommendation to the attention of the local, national and regional authorities, and of institutions, services or bodies and associations concerned with the safeguarding, conservation and management of historic urban areas and their wider geographical settings.

Introduction

1. Our time is witness to the largest human migration in history. More than half of the world’s population now lives in urban areas. Urban areas are increasingly important as engines of growth and as centres of innovation and creativity; they provide opportunities for employment and education and respond to people’s evolving needs and aspirations.

2. Rapid and uncontrolled urbanization, however, may frequently result in social and spatial fragmentation and in a drastic deterioration of the quality of the urban environment and of the surrounding rural areas. Notably, this may be due to excessive building density, standardized and monotonous buildings, loss of public space and amenities, inadequate infrastructure, debilitating poverty, social isolation, and an increasing risk of climate-related disasters.

3. Urban heritage, including its tangible and intangible components, constitutes a key resource in enhancing the liveability of urban areas, and fosters economic development and social cohesion in a changing global environment. As the future of humanity hinges on the effective planning and management of resources, conservation has become a strategy to achieve a balance between urban growth and quality of life on a sustainable basis.

4. In the course of the past half century, urban heritage conservation has emerged as an important sector of public policy worldwide. It is a response to the need to preserve shared values and to benefit from the legacy of history. However, the shift from an emphasis on architectural monuments primarily towards a broader recognition of the importance of the social, cultural and economic processes in the conservation of urban values, should be matched by a drive to adapt the existing policies and to create new tools to address this vision.

5. This Recommendation addresses the need to better integrate and frame urban heritage conservation strategies within the larger goals of overall sustainable development, in order to support public and private actions aimed at preserving and enhancing the quality of the human environment. It suggests a landscape approach for identifying, conserving and managing historic areas within their broader urban contexts, by considering the interrelationships of their physical forms, their spatial organization and connection, their natural features and settings, and their social, cultural and economic values.

6. This approach addresses the policy, governance and management concerns involving a variety of stakeholders, including local, national, regional, international, public and private actors in the urban development process.

7. This Recommendation builds upon the four previous UNESCO recommendations concerning heritage preservation, and recognizes the importance and the validity of their concepts and principles in the history and practice of conservation. In addition, modern conservation conventions and charters address the many dimensions of cultural and natural heritage, and constitute the foundations of this Recommendation.

the Safeguarding and Contemporary Role of Historic Areas, the 1964 ICOMOS International Charter for the Conservation and Restoration of Monuments and Sites (Venice Charter), the 1982 ICOMOS Historic Gardens (Florence Charter), and the 1987 ICOMOS Charter for the Conservation of Historic Towns and Urban Areas (Washington Charter), the 2005 ICOMOS Xi’an Declaration on the Conservation of the Setting of Heritage Structures, Sites and Areas, as well as the 2005 Vienna Memorandum on World Heritage and Contemporary Architecture – Managing the Historic Urban Landscape.

I. Definition

8. The historic urban landscape is the urban area understood as the result of a historic layering of cultural and natural values and attributes, extending beyond the notion of “historic centre” or “ensemble” to include the broader urban context and its geographical setting.

9. This wider context includes notably the site’s topography, geomorphology, hydrology and natural features, its built environment, both historic and contemporary, its infrastructures above and below ground, its open spaces and gardens, its land use patterns and spatial organization, perceptions and visual relationships, as well as all other elements of the urban structure. It also includes social and cultural practices and values, economic processes and the intangible dimensions of heritage as related to diversity and identity.

10. This definition provides the basis for a comprehensive and integrated approach for the identification, assessment, conservation and management of historic urban landscapes within an overall sustainable development framework.

11. The historic urban landscape approach is aimed at preserving the quality of the human environment, enhancing the productive and sustainable use of urban spaces, while recognizing their dynamic character, and promoting social and functional diversity. It integrates the goals of urban heritage conservation and those of social and economic development. It is rooted in a balanced and sustainable relationship between the urban and natural environment, between the needs of present and future generations and the legacy from the past.

12. The historic urban landscape approach considers cultural diversity and creativity as key assets for human, social and economic development, and provides tools to manage physical and social transformations and to ensure that contemporary interventions are harmoniously integrated with heritage in a historic setting and take into account regional contexts.

13. The historic urban landscape approach learns from the traditions and perceptions of local communities, while respecting the values of the national and international communities.

II. Challenges and opportunities for the historic urban landscape

14. The existing UNESCO recommendations recognize the important role of historic areas in modern societies. These recommendations also identify a number of specific threats to the conservation of historic urban areas, and provide general principles, policies and guidelines to meet such challenges.

15. The historic urban landscape approach reflects the fact that both the discipline and practice of urban heritage conservation have evolved significantly in recent decades, enabling policy-makers and managers to deal more effectively with new challenges and opportunities. The historic urban landscape approach supports communities in their quest for development and adaptation, while retaining the characteristics and values linked to their history and collective memory, and to the environment.

16. In the past decades, owing to the sharp increase in the world’s urban population, the scale and speed of development, and the changing economy, urban settlements and their historic areas have become centres and drivers of economic growth in many regions of the world, and have taken on a new role in cultural and social life. As a result, they have also come under a large array of new pressures, including:

Urbanization and globalization

17. Urban growth is transforming the essence of many historic urban areas. Global processes have a deep impact on the values attributed by communities to urban areas and their settings, and on the perceptions and realities of their inhabitants and users. On the one hand, urbanization provides economic, social and cultural opportunities that can enhance the quality of life and traditional character of urban areas; on the other hand, the unmanaged changes in urban density and growth can undermine the sense of place, the integrity of the urban fabric, and the identity of communities. Some historic urban areas are losing their functionality, traditional role and populations. The historic urban landscape approach may assist in managing and mitigating such impacts.

Development

18. Many economic processes offer ways and means to alleviate urban poverty and to promote social and human development. The greater availability of innovations, such as information technology and sustainable planning, design and building practices, can improve urban areas, thus enhancing the quality of life. When properly managed through the historic urban landscape approach, new functions, such as services and tourism, are important economic initiatives that can contribute to the well-being of the communities and to the conservation of historic urban areas and their cultural heritage while ensuring economic and social diversity and the residential function. Failing to capture these opportunities leads to unsustainable and unviable cities, just as implementing them in an inadequate and inappropriate manner results in the destruction of heritage assets and irreplaceable losses for future generations.

Environment

19. Human settlements have constantly adapted to climatic and environmental changes, including those resulting from disasters. However, the intensity and speed of present changes are challenging our complex urban environments. Concern for the environment, in particular for water and energy consumption, calls for approaches and new models for urban living, based on ecologically sensitive policies and practices aimed at strengthening sustainability and the quality of urban life. Many of these initiatives, however, should integrate natural and cultural heritage as resources for sustainable development.
20. Changes to historic urban areas can also result from sudden disasters and armed conflicts. These may be short lived but can have lasting effects. The historic urban landscape approach may assist in managing and mitigating such impacts.

III. Policies

21. Modern urban conservation policies, as reflected in existing international recommendations and charters, have set the stage for the preservation of historic urban areas. However, present and future challenges require the definition and implementation of a new generation of public policies identifying and protecting the historic layering of sustainable development and balance of cultural and natural values in urban environments.

22. Conservation of the urban heritage should be integrated into general policy planning and practices and those related to the broader urban context. Policies should provide mechanisms for balancing conservation and sustainability in the short and long terms. Special emphasis should be placed on the harmonious integration of contemporary interventions into the historic urban fabric. In particular, the responsibilities of the different stakeholders are the following:

(a) Member States should integrate urban heritage conservation strategies into national development policies and agendas according to the historic urban landscape approach. Within this framework, local authorities should prepare urban development plans taking into account the area’s values, including the landscape and other heritage values, and features associated therewith;

(b) Public and private stakeholders should cooperate, inter alia, through partnerships to ensure the successful application of the historic urban landscape approach;

(c) International organizations dealing with sustainable development processes should integrate the historic urban landscape approach into their strategies, plans and operations;

(d) National and international non-governmental organizations should participate in developing and disseminating tools and best practices for the implementation of the historic urban landscape approach.

23. All levels of government – local, regional, national/federal, – aware of their responsibility – should contribute to the definition, elaboration, implementation and assessment of urban heritage conservation policies. These policies should be based on a participatory approach by all stakeholders and coordinated from both the institutional and sectorial viewpoints.

IV. Tools

24. The approach based on the historic urban landscape implies the application of a range of traditional and innovative tools adapted to local contexts. Some of these tools, which need to be developed as part of the process involving the different stakeholders, might include:

(a) Civic engagement tools should involve a diverse cross-section of stakeholders, and empower them to identify key values in their urban areas, develop visions that reflect their diversity, set goals, and agree on actions to safeguard their heritage and promote sustainable development. These tools, which constitute an integral part of urban governance dynamics, should facilitate intercultural dialogue by learning from communities about their histories, traditions, values, needs and aspirations, and by facilitating mediation and negotiation between groups with conflicting interests.

(b) Knowledge and planning tools should help protect the integrity and authenticity of the attributes of urban heritage. They should also allow for the recognition of cultural significance and diversity, and provide for the monitoring and management of change to improve the quality of life and of urban space. These tools would include documentation and mapping of cultural and natural characteristics. Heritage, social and environmental impact assessments should be used to support and facilitate decision-making processes within a framework of sustainable development.

(c) Regulatory systems should reflect local conditions, and may include legislative and regulatory measures aimed at the conservation and management of the tangible and intangible attributes of the urban heritage, including their social, environmental and cultural values. Traditional and customary systems should be recognized and reinforced as necessary.

(d) Financial tools should be aimed at building capacities and supporting innovative income-generating development, rooted in tradition. In addition to government and global funds from international agencies, financial tools should be effectively employed to foster private investment at the local level. Micro-credit and other flexible financing to support local enterprise, as well as a variety of models of partnerships, are also central to making the historic urban landscape approach financially sustainable.

V. Capacity-building, research, information and communication

25. Capacity-building should involve the main stakeholders: communities, decision-makers, and professionals and managers, in order to foster understanding of the historic urban landscape approach and its implementation. Effective capacity-building hinges on an active collaboration of these main stakeholders, aimed at adapting the implementation of this Recommendation to regional contexts in order to define and refine the local strategies and objectives, action frameworks and resource mobilization schemes.

26. Research should target the complex layering of urban settlements, in order to identify values, understand their meaning for the communities, and present them to visitors in a comprehensive manner. Academic and university institutions and other centres of research should be encouraged to develop scientific research on aspects of the historic urban landscape approach, and cooperate at the local, national, regional and international level. It is essential to document the state of urban areas and their evolution, to facilitate the evaluation of proposals for change, and to improve protective and managerial skills and procedures.

27. Encourage the use of information and communication technology to document, understand and present the complex layering of urban areas and their constituent components. The collection and analysis of this data is an essential part of the knowledge of urban areas. To communicate with all sectors of society, it is particularly important to reach out to youth and all under-represented groups in order to encourage their participation.

VI. International cooperation

28. Member States and international governmental and non-governmental organizations should facilitate public understanding and involvement in the implementation of the historic urban landscape approach, by disseminating best practices and lessons learned from different parts of the world, in order to strengthen the network of knowledge-sharing and capacity-building.

29. Member States should promote multinational cooperation between local authorities.

30. International development and cooperation agencies of Member States, non-governmental organizations and foundations should be encouraged to develop methodologies which take into account the historic urban landscape approach and to harmonize them with their assistance programmes and projects pertaining to urban areas.

APPENDIX

Glossary of definitions

Historic area/city (from the 1976 Recommendation)

“Historic and architectural (including vernacular) areas” shall be taken to mean any groups of buildings, structures and open spaces including archaeological and palaeontological sites, constituting human settlements in an urban or rural environment, the cohesion and value of which, from the archaeological, architectural, prehistoric, historic, aesthetic or sociocultural point of view are recognized. Among these “areas”, which are very varied in nature, it is possible to distinguish the following “in particular: prehistoric sites, historic towns, old urban quarters, villages and hamlets as well as homogeneous monumental groups, it being understood that the latter should as a rule be carefully preserved unchanged.

Historic urban area (from the ICOMOS Washington Charter)

Historic urban areas, large and small, include cities, towns and historic centres or quarters, together with their natural and man-made environments. Beyond their role as historical documents, these areas embody the values of traditional urban cultures.

Urban heritage (from European Union research report Nº 16 (2004), Sustainable development of Urban historical areas through and active Integration within Towns – SUIT)

Urban heritage comprises three main categories:

- Monumental heritage of exceptional cultural value;
- Non-exceptional heritage elements but present in a coherent way with a relative abundance;
- New urban elements to be considered (for instance):
  - The urban built form;
  - The open space: streets, public open spaces;
  - Urban infrastructures: material networks and equipments.

Urban conservation

Urban conservation is not limited to the preservation of single buildings. It views architecture as but one element of the overall urban setting, making it a complex and multifaceted discipline. By definition, then, urban conservation lies at the very heart of urban planning.

Built environment

The built environment refers to human-made (versus natural) resources and infrastructure designed to support human activity, such as buildings, roads, parks, and other amenities.

The landscape approach is a framework for making landscape-level conservation decisions. The landscape approach helps to reach decisions about the advisability of particular interventions (such as a new road or plantation), and to facilitate the planning, negotiation and implementation of activities across a whole landscape.

Historic urban landscape

(see definition in paragraph 9 of the Recommendation)
Setting (from the ICOMOS Xi’an Declaration)
The setting of a heritage structure, site or area is defined as the immediate and extended environment that is part of, or contributes to, its significance and distinctive character.

Cultural significance (from the ICOMOS Australia Burra Charter)
Cultural significance means aesthetic, historic, scientific, social or spiritual value for past, present or future generations. Cultural significance is embodied in the place itself, its fabric, setting, use, associations, meanings, records, related places and related objects. Places may have a range of values for different individuals or groups.

Also recognizing the important role played by the International Council of Museums (ICOM), an international agency specialized in the promotion, conservation and safeguarding of the cultural and natural heritage related to the activities of museums,
Convinced that the strengthening of the protection and promotion of museums and collections contributes to a culture of peace, through the promotion of culture and the right to memory, the respect for diversity, and the incentive for cultural exchange, mutual knowledge and understanding among peoples,

The General Conference,
Recognizing that the phenomenon of Internet piracy affects most countries worldwide, and poses a serious threat to cultural creativity and cultural diversity, and to the free circulation of ideas by electronic means,
Considering that the role of rights holders and Internet service providers is crucial in the combat of piracy on the Internet, and that a number of national policies for partnerships among stakeholders, including, in many instances, the with the State itself, have already been set up with this aim, and have now produced their first results,
Noting that Greece has an interest in this area, and explores national policies with the aim of developing a strategy to combat Internet piracy,
Also considering that exploring best practices in this area through the exchange of ideas, views and experience would be to the benefit of the protection and promotion of the diversity of cultures,
1. Invites Greece to work with the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) and other competent international organizations,
2. Welcomes the intention of Greece to organize in 2012, at its own expense, a conference on national partnership policies on copyright enforcement on the Internet between rights-holders and Internet Service Providers (ISPs) with the aim of exploring, through the exchange of experience among stakeholders, best practices in the area of cultural creativity and cultural diversity which may be useful to States for further reference or use.

69 Participation Programme

The General Conference

1. Authorizes the Director-General:

(a) to implement the Programme of Participation in the activities of Member States, in accordance with the following principles and conditions;
(b) to allocate for this purpose an amount of $17,917,800 for direct programme costs, and requests the Director-General to use the funds remaining and available after the closing of the accounts corresponding to document 35 C/5 in order to maintain the budgetary level of the Participation Programme at a level which will not be lower than that contained in document 35 C/5;
(c) to further allocate for this purpose an amount of $53,100 for operating costs and an amount of $1,112,500 for staff costs.

A. Principles

1. The Participation Programme is one of the means employed by the Organization to achieve its objectives, through participation in activities carried out by Member States or Associate Members, or by territories, organizations or institutions, in its fields of competence. This participation is designed to strengthen the partnership between UNESCO and its Member States and make that partnership more effective through a sharing of contributions.

2. Under the Participation Programme, priority will be given to proposals submitted by least developed countries (LDCs), developing countries, post-conflict and post-disaster countries, small island developing States (SIDS), countries in transition and middle income countries.

3. Requests shall be submitted to the Director-General by the Member States through the National Commissions for UNESCO or, where there is no National Commission, through a designated government channel.

4. The projects or action plans submitted by the Member States under the Participation Programme must relate to the priorities of the Organization, in particular to the major programmes, interdisciplinary projects, and activities to benefit Africa, youth and gender equality, the least developed countries, developing countries, post-conflict and post-disaster countries, small island developing States (SIDS) and countries in transition, and to the activities of the National Commissions for UNESCO. In the selection of Participation Programme projects, due account will be taken of the priorities defined by the governing bodies for UNESCO’s regular programme.

5. Each Member State may submit 10 requests or projects, which must be numbered in order of priority from 1 to 10. Requests or projects from national non-governmental organizations will be included in the quota submitted by each Member State.

6. The order of priority laid down by the Member State may only be changed by the National Commission itself and before the start of the approval process.

7. The international non-governmental organizations in an official partnership with UNESCO, of which the list is established by the Executive Board, may submit up to two requests under the Participation Programme for projects with subregional, regional or interregional impact, provided that their request is supported by at least the Member State where the project will be implemented and another Member State concerned by the request. In the absence of supporting letters, none of these requests may be considered.

8. Requests should be submitted as soon as possible at the beginning of the biennium and no later than the deadline set for the submission of requests, 28 February 2012, except for requests for emergency assistance or a regional project, which may be submitted at any time in the biennium.

9. The Secretariat shall advise Member States of the response by the Director-General to the requests within three months of the deadline of 28 February 2012.

10. Beneficiaries. Assistance under the Participation Programme may be accorded to:

(a) Member States or Associate Members upon request through their National Commissions or, where there is no National Commission, through a designated government channel, to promote activities of a national character. For activities of a subregional or interregional character, requests are submitted by the National Commissions of the Member States or Associate Members on whose territory they take place; these requests must be supported by at least two other National Commissions of participating Member States or Associate Members. For activities of a regional character, requests are limited to three by region and must be submitted by one Member State or a group of Member States. These requests must be supported by at least three Member States (or Associate Members) concerned and will not come within the quota of 10 requests submitted by each Member State; they will be evaluated and screened by the Secretariat in accordance with the procedure established for the processing of requests submitted under the Participation Programme;

(b) a non-self-governing or trust territory, upon the request of the National Commission of the Member State responsible for the conduct of the territory’s external relations;

Resolution adopted on the report of the PRX Commission at the 15th plenary meeting, on 9 November 2011.

12. Total amount of assistance. Whichever of the above forms of assistance is requested, the total value of the assistance provided for each request shall not be in excess of $26,000 for a national project or activity, $35,000 for a subregional or interregional project or activity and $46,000 for a regional project or activity. The financial provision made by the applicant must be sufficient to implement the activity satisfactorily. The activity must be executed and all funds disbursed in accordance with the Financial Regulations of the Organization. The expenditures must be made according to the distribution of the budget as approved by the Director-General and communicated to Member States in the letter of approval.

13. Approval of requests. When deciding upon a request, the Director-General shall take into account:

(a) the Participation Programme will be implemented within the biennial programme of the Organization, of which it forms an integral part. (b) the results of the Participation Programme will be made known with a view to the planning and implementation of the Organization’s future activities. The activity reports and sexennial reports, submitted after completion of each project by the Secretariat, will be used by the Secretariat to evaluate the Participation Programme’s impact and results in Member States and its consistency with the objectives and priorities set by UNESCO. An evaluation by the Secretariat may also be undertaken while the project is being carried out; the list of beneficiaries submitting reports late will be transmitted to the governing bodies;
(c) the use of UNESCO’s name and logo for the activities approved under the Participation Programme, in accordance with the directives approved by the governing bodies, will give this programme a higher profile when it is carried out at the national, subregional, regional or interregional levels, and the beneficiaries will report on the results recorded in this way.

Scale of assessments and currency of Member States’ contributions

The General Conference,

I

Scale of assessments

Recalling Article IX of the Constitution, which stipulates in paragraph 2 that the General Conference shall approve and give final effect to the budget and to the apportionment of financial responsibility among the States Members of the Organization,
Considering that the scale of assessments for Member States of UNESCO has always been based on that of the United Nations, subject to the adjustments necessitated by the difference in membership between the two organizations,
Resolves that:
(a) the scale of assessments of Member States of UNESCO for the years 2012 and 2013 shall be calculated on the basis of the scale or scales of assessment adopted by the United Nations General Assembly for those years at its 64th and 67th sessions; the UNESCO scale or scales shall be established with the same minimum rate and the same maximum rate, all the other rates being adjusted to take into account the difference in membership between the two organizations in order to derive a UNESCO scale of 100%;
(b) if the United Nations General Assembly approves a scale for 2013 which is different from that for 2012, the relevant provisions of paragraphs 3 and 4 of Article 5 of the Financial Regulations shall not be applied;
(c) if the United Nations General Assembly revises the scale for 2012 at its 66th session in December 2011, the revised scale will be adopted by UNESCO;
(d) new Members depositing their instruments of ratification after 27 October 2011 and Associate Members shall be assessed in accordance with the formulas set forth in 26 C/Resolution 23.1;
(e) rates of assessment for Member States shall be rounded off to the same number of decimal places as in the United Nations scale or scales; rates of assessment for Associate Members shall be rounded off to one additional decimal place, if necessary, in order to allow the effective reduction to 60% of the minimum rate of assessment for Member States stipulated in 26 C/Resolution 23.1.

II

Currency of assessment and payment of contributions

Having examined the report of the Director-General on the currency of contributions of Member States (36 C/34),
Recalling Article 5, paragraph 6, of the Financial Regulations, which stipulates that “Contributions to the budget shall be assessed partly in United States dollars and partly in euros in a proportion to be determined by the General Conference and shall be paid in these or other currencies as decided by the General Conference ...”,
Conscious of the need to reduce the exposure of the Organization to adverse currency fluctuation during 2012-2013,

1. Resolves, in respect of contributions for the years 2012 and 2013, that:
(a) contributions to the budget shall be assessed on the basis of the approved scale of assessments as follows:
   (i) in euros 57% of the budget calculated at the rate of $1 equal to €0.869;
   (ii) in United States dollars – the remainder of the amount of contributions to be paid by Member States;
(b) contributions shall be paid in the two currencies in which they are assessed; nevertheless payment of the amount assessed in one currency may be made, at the choice of the Member State, in the other currency of assessment; unless the amounts assessed are received simultaneously and in full in the currencies in which they are assessed, credit shall be given against contributions due in proportion to the amounts

1 Resolution adopted on the report of the ADM Commission at the 17th plenary meeting, on 10 November 2011.
assessed in both currencies, by the application of the United Nations operational rate of exchange between the United States dollar and the euro on the date on which the contribution is credited to a bank account of the Organization;

(c) contributions to be assessed in euros for the financial period that remain unpaid at the time of assessment of contributions for the subsequent financial period shall be considered as due and payable in United States dollars thereafter, and for this purpose shall be converted into United States dollars using the euro rate of exchange that is most beneficial to the Organization, by reference to the following four options:

(i) the constant rate of exchange of 0.869 euro to the dollar used to calculate the euro portion of assessed contributions for the biennium;

(ii) the average United Nations operational rate of exchange for the euro during the biennium;

(iii) the United Nations operational rate of exchange for the euro applicable for the month of December of the second year of the biennium;

(iv) the United Nations operational rate for the euro applicable on 31 December of the second year of the biennium;

(d) arrears of contributions from previous financial periods and arrears converted into annual instalments considered as due and payable in United States dollars, but received in a currency other than the United States dollar, shall be converted into United States dollars at either the most favourable rate which UNESCO can obtain for conversion of the currency in question into United States dollars on the market on the date on which the amount is credited to a bank account of the Organization, or at the United Nations operational rate of exchange on the same date, whichever is more beneficial to the Organization;

(e) when contributions are received in advance in euros for subsequent financial periods, such advance contributions shall be converted into United States dollars at the operational rate of exchange ruling on the date when payment is credited to a bank account of the Organization; all contributions received in advance shall be held in the name of the contributor in dollars, and credit shall be given against contributions due for the subsequent financial period in dollars and euros, in the proportion determined by the General Conference, using the operational rate of exchange prevailing on the date of dispatch of letters of assessment for the first year of the following financial period;

Considering nevertheless that Member States may find it desirable to discharge part of their contributions in the currency of their choice,

2. Resolves that:

(a) the Director-General is authorized, upon request from a Member State, to accept payment in the national currency of the Member State if she considers that there is a foreseeable need for that currency in the remaining months of the calendar year;

(b) when accepting national currencies, the Director-General, in consultation with the Member State concerned, shall determine that part of the contribution which can be accepted in the national currency, taking into account any amounts requested for payment of UNESCO coupons; in such case the Member State concerned must make a global proposal;

(c) in order to ensure that contributions paid in national currencies will be usable by the Organization, the Director-General is authorized to fix a time limit for payment, in consultation with the Member State concerned, after which contributions would become payable in the currencies mentioned in paragraph 1 above;

(d) acceptance of currencies other than the United States dollar or the euro is subject to the following conditions:

(i) currencies so accepted must be usable, without further negotiation, within the exchange regulations of the country concerned, for meeting all expenditure incurred by UNESCO within that country;

(ii) the rate of exchange to be applied shall be the most favourable rate which UNESCO can obtain for the conversion of the currency in question into United States dollars at the date on which the contribution is credited to a bank account of the Organization; after translation into United States dollars, credit shall be given against contributions for 2012–2013 where appropriate in proportion to the amounts assessed in United States dollars and euros, in the manner specified in paragraph 1 above;

(iii) if, at any time within the 12 months following the payment of a contribution in a currency other than the United States dollar or the euro, there should occur a reduction in the exchange value or a devaluation of such currency in terms of United States dollars, the Member State concerned may require the Director-General, upon notification, to make an adjustment payment to cover the exchange loss pertaining to the unspent balance of the contribution; to the extent that the Director-General considers that there is a foreseeable need for that currency in the remaining months of the calendar year, she is authorized to accept the adjustment payment in the national currency of the Member State;

(iv) if, at any time within the 12 months following the payment of a contribution in a currency other than the United States dollar or the euro, there should occur an increase in the exchange value or a revaluation of such currency in terms of United States dollars, the Member State concerned may require the Director-General, upon notification, to make an adjustment payment to cover the exchange gain pertaining to the unspent balance of the contribution; such adjustment payments will be made in the national currency of the Member State;

3. Resolves further that any differences due to variations in the rates of exchange or to bank charges not exceeding $100 relating to the last payment against contributions due for the year in question, shall be posted to the profit and loss account.

   (d) the Director-General is authorized to advance from the Working Capital Fund, in accordance with Article 5.1 of the Financial Regulations, such sums as may be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending the receipt of contributions; sums so advanced shall be reimbursed as soon as receipts from contributions are available for that purpose;

New Directives concerning UNESCO’s partnership with non-governmental organizations

The General Conference,

Acknowledging the growing number of non-governmental actors involved at all levels and in all fields in the formulation and implementation of UNESCO’s programmes, thereby attesting to their strategic role,

Further acknowledging the need for UNESCO to open up to ever more diverse partners with a grasp of the realities on the ground and to individuals, in every region of the world, in particular those with the greatest needs,

Taking into account the Organization’s constant efforts in past years, both at the level of the Secretariat and of the governing bodies, to diversify, revitalize and strengthen its cooperation with NGOs, and to take their skills, effectiveness and potential into better account,
Adopts the new Directives concerning UNESCO’s partnership with non-governmental organizations, the text of which is annexed hereto; the new Directives supersede the Directives that it adopted under 28 C/Resolution 13.42.

ANNEX

Directives concerning UNESCO’s partnership with non-governmental organizations

Preamble

1. In implementation of the provisions of Article XI of its Constitution, UNESCO has built up over the years a valuable network of cooperation in its fields of competence with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) representing civil society. This partnership bears witness to the importance of the work of those organizations alongside government-sponsored action in international cooperation in the service of peoples for development, equality, international understanding and peace.

2. Non-governmental organizations are now involved in all of UNESCO’s fields of competence. These Directives provide the framework within which the partnerships it desires to maintain with such organizations may develop under the most favourable conditions. The Directives are designed to make the non-governmental organizations official partners for the development and implementation of UNESCO’s programmes. The aim is to develop a genuine partnership culture allowing UNESCO to legitimize its action, achieve its objectives and make them more visible. Since UNESCO is not a funding institution, this partnership will be essentially of an intellectual nature.

3. The following provisions are designed to lay the foundations for a mutual partnership between UNESCO and the competent non-governmental organizations representing civil society for the preparation and the execution of its programme, and thus increase international cooperation in the fields of education, science, culture, communication and information. In addition, they should promote the emergence of new organizations that are representative of civil society in those regions of the world where such organizations, for historical, cultural or geographical reasons, are isolated or weak, and help to include them in the partnership.

I. General principles

1. Definition

UNESCO may establish official partnerships with international, regional, national or local non-governmental organizations (NGOs). Any organization may qualify as a non-governmental organization which may become a partner of UNESCO provided that it has not been established by intergovernmental agreement, or by a government and that its purposes, functions, structure and operation are non-governmental, democratic and non-profit-making in character. The international or regional NGO must form, through its regular active membership (consisting of institutions and/or individuals), a community linked by a desire to pursue, in a significant number of countries or regions, the objectives for which it was established.

2. Categories of partnership

Two categories of partnership may be established with NGOs according to the structure and aims of such organizations, the nature of their cooperation with UNESCO and the scale of the contribution they are able to make to it. One is aimed at achieving a flexible and dynamic partnership in the definition and implementation of UNESCO’s programmes (consultative status), and the other involves close and sustained cooperation in defining and implementing the Organization’s programme (associate status).

3. Common essential conditions

3.1 The non-governmental organization shall fulfil the following conditions:

(a) it shall be engaged in activities in one or more specific fields of UNESCO’s competence, and it shall be able and willing to make an effective contribution to framing UNESCO’s objectives and/or to implementing its programmes, in conformity with the principles proclaimed in UNESCO’s Constitution;

(b) it shall be effectively engaged in activities in a spirit of cooperation, tolerance and solidarity, in the interests of humankind and with respect for cultural identities;

(c) it shall have a recognized legal status;

(d) it shall have an established headquarters and be governed by democratically adopted statutes stipulating, in particular, that its general policy is determined by a conference, assembly or other representative body that functions democratically; those statutes shall also stipulate that it shall have a permanent, representative and regularly renewed governing body, representatives who are duly elected.
by the main body of the organization, and basic resources deriving chiefly from members’ contributions, its activities and gifts or bequests, that enable it to function;

(e) it shall have been in existence and have been carrying out activities for at least two years at the time it requests the establishment of a partnership.

3.2 Cooperation with national or local NGOs shall, moreover, be conducted in consultation with the National Commission for UNESCO of the Member State concerned and, if appropriate, in liaison with UNESCO’s field units. Such organizations are not eligible for associate status.

II. Consultative status

1. The Director-General may, if he/she deems it useful for the development and implementation of UNESCO’s programmes, cooperate with any non-governmental organization in the category of official partnership known as “consultative status” according to the admission procedures laid down in section IV.

2. This category of partnership is designed to enable UNESCO to establish and maintain flexible and dynamic partnerships with any organization of civil society that is active in UNESCO’s fields of competence at whatever level, and to benefit from its expertise, the representativeness of its networks for the dissemination of information and, if appropriate, its operational capacities in the field. Moreover, this category of partnership should make it possible to facilitate the emergence of organizations which are representative of civil society, and their interaction at the international level, in those parts of the world where they are weak or isolated.

III. Associate status

1. The Executive Board, on the recommendation of the Director-General, should he/she deem such a decision to be useful for the achievement of the objectives of UNESCO, may admit an international or regional non-governmental organization fulfilling the conditions defined in sections I and II, to the partnership category known as “associate status”. This partnership is established for a renewable period of eight years.

2. Such organizations shall also:
   (a) have proven competence in an important field of education, natural sciences, social and human sciences, culture, or communication and information, and have a record of regular major contributions to framing UNESCO’s objectives and implementing its programmes;
   (b) have maintained a continuous and effective partnership (consultative status) for at least two years.

IV. Admission, modification, termination and suspension of partnerships

1. Admission
   A. Consultative status

   1.1 Requests for partnership (consultative status) may be submitted at any time by NGOs to the Director-General, together with the following documents concerning the NGO:
      (a) the statutes;
      (b) the instrument of legal recognition;
      (c) the list of members by country and, where appropriate, by category, as provided in the statutes;
      (d) the latest activity report covering a period of at least two years, including a detailed financial report on the previous financial year;
      (e) a brief description of the projects that the organization hopes to implement with UNESCO, and a brief description of activities already implemented in cooperation with UNESCO.

   1.2 The Director-General shall decide upon the establishment of a partnership between UNESCO and the NGOs (consultative status) and shall report thereon to the Executive Board once a year.

   B. Associate status

   1.3 The Executive Board shall decide on the admission of NGO partners to associate status with UNESCO and on the renewal of the partnership, on the recommendation of the Director-General (see section III).

   1.4 Any international or regional partner organization with consultative status for at least two years may submit a request for admission to associate status, no later than 30 November of each year, for decision by the Executive Board at its first session of the following year. The request must include a list of the NGO’s individual and/or institutional members, its most recent activities report, and a summary of cooperation with UNESCO in the previous two years. The summary must attest to regular, specific and productive cooperation between UNESCO and the NGO on the basis of several joint projects that have demonstrated the importance to UNESCO of maintaining a close partnership with the NGO in order to implement its programmes. Requests rejected by the Executive Board may not be resubmitted to it until at least four years have elapsed after its decision.

   1.5 The Director-General shall inform the organizations admitted to each partnership category of the corresponding obligations and advantages.

2. Modification, termination and suspension of partnerships
   A. Modification of partnerships

   2.1 Where the Director-General considers that circumstances make it necessary to move an organization from associate to consultative status, he/she shall refer the matter to the Executive Board for decision. Before doing so, he/she shall inform the organization concerned of the grounds for his/her proposal, and shall communicate any observations the organization may wish to make to the Executive Board before any final decision is taken.
B. Termination of partnerships

2.2 When the Director-General deems it necessary to end an associate partnership with a non-governmental organization, he/she shall refer the matter to the Executive Board for decision. Before doing so, he/she shall inform the organization concerned of the grounds for his/her proposal, and shall communicate any observations that the organization may wish to make to the Executive Board before any final decision is taken.

2.3 The decision to terminate a consultative partnership depends on the Director-General. He/she shall inform the Executive Board.

2.4 Absence of collaboration for a period of four years between UNESCO and a partner organization under these Directives shall result in the automatic termination of the official partnership.

C. Suspension of partnerships

2.5 As an interim measure, the Director-General may, if circumstances so require, suspend the partnership with an organization, until such time as the Executive Board is able to take a decision, where necessary.

V. Obligations of UNESCO’s NGO partners

1. General principles

UNESCO partner organizations shall:

(a) keep the Director-General regularly informed of their activities, particularly those carried out in UNESCO’s fields of competence, of changes that have taken place in their governing bodies, and of the assistance given by them to the achievement of UNESCO’s objectives;

(b) maintain, through their networks and regional and/or national representatives, effective coordination with UNESCO’s field units and with the National Commissions for UNESCO in the various countries.

VI. Advantages granted to UNESCO’s NGO partners

1. General principles

(a) the Director-General shall take all necessary measures to ensure the appropriate exchange of information and documents with NGOs on matters of joint interest;

(b) they shall be associated as closely and regularly as possible with the various stages of the planning (see section VII) and execution of UNESCO’s programme within their own particular field;

(c) in accordance with the provisions of Article IV, paragraph 14, of the Constitution, and with the provisions of the Rules of Procedure of the General Conference, official NGO partners of UNESCO whose admission lies within the competence of the Executive Board may send observers to sessions of the General Conference. The other official NGO partners of UNESCO may be invited to send observers on the decision of the Director-General acting on behalf of the General Conference. These observers may make statements on matters within their respective competence in the commissions, committees and subsidiary bodies of the General Conference, with the consent of the presiding officer; they may address plenary meetings of the General Conference on particular matters of major importance that fall within their competence with the authorization of the General Committee of the Conference, in accordance with the provisions of the Rules of Procedure of the General Conference;

(h) they shall have access to some of the financial procedures for cooperation described in section VIII of these Directives;

(i) they may, under the authority of their governing body, submit written statements at any time to the Director-General on UNESCO programme matters within their competence. The Director-General shall,
if he/she deems it to be necessary, communicate the substance of these statements to the Executive Board or, if appropriate, to the General Conference;

(j) they may also use UNESCO’s conference rooms and facilities on the most favourable terms.

2. Consultative status

In addition, memoranda of agreement on the execution of one or more specific projects may be concluded with organizations in consultative status with UNESCO.

3. Associate status

In addition, the following advantages shall be granted to organizations enjoying associate status with UNESCO:

(a) framework agreements for cooperation, concerning general cooperation and for a renewable duration of eight years, may be concluded with these organizations, setting the joint priorities that they and UNESCO undertake to pursue together during that period;

(b) as far as is possible, office accommodation may be provided on the most favourable terms for those organizations with which it is particularly necessary for the Secretariat to keep in constant touch for the implementation of UNESCO’s programme.

VII. Consultation about UNESCO’s strategy and programme

In order to associate non-governmental organizations fully with the development of UNESCO's objectives, priorities and programmes and to foster sustained upstream cooperation, UNESCO offers its NGO partners under these Directives a chance to be fully involved in its programming cycle in the following ways:

(a) NGO partners of UNESCO under these Directives shall receive a questionnaire as part of consultations to draw up UNESCO’s Medium-Term Strategy, and its Draft Programme and Budget. They are thereby invited, on the Director-General’s request, to provide their views and suggestions and to submit recommendations in writing about UNESCO’s priorities and programme. These views and suggestions shall be communicated to the Executive Board together with the preliminary proposals of the Director-General;

(b) An information meeting shall be organized by the Secretariat at UNESCO Headquarters in order to provide guidance to NGOs on this procedure. As far as is possible, this meeting shall be streamed live online, thereby enabling NGOs unable to attend to submit questions to the speakers electronically;

(c) the International Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations in partnership with UNESCO (see section XI) is then invited to communicate collectively to the Director-General the NGOs’ views and suggestions about the Draft Programme and Budget, including the guidance provided by the Executive Board;

(d) at sessions of the UNESCO General Conference, NGO partners may also address the commissions, committees and subsidiary bodies as well as the plenary, in accordance with Article IV, paragraph 14, of the Constitution, and with the provisions of the Rules of Procedure of the General Conference (see section VI).

VIII. Financial arrangements for cooperation

UNESCO may make financial contributions to non-governmental organizations likely to make a particularly effective contribution to the implementation of its programme. NGOs may make financial contributions to UNESCO for the execution of its programme.

1. General principles

Financial contributions granted by UNESCO to non-governmental organizations shall be governed, as appropriate, by the following principles:

(a) they shall be granted in accordance with the relevant rules currently in force;

(b) they shall be granted for programmes and activities that have a bearing on UNESCO’s priorities or constitute a useful addition to UNESCO’s programmes and activities;

(c) in no circumstances shall they constitute a permanent commitment on the part of UNESCO;

(d) they shall be granted solely for the purpose of supplementing the revenue that the beneficiary organization derives from other sources;

(e) an organization receiving a financial contribution shall have made appropriate arrangements for regular evaluation of the activities so financed and for the submission of reports on the implementation of those activities.

2. Practical arrangements

The financial contributions are of three kinds: (a) contributions for the implementation of a framework agreement, (b) other contracts for the execution of UNESCO’s programme, and (c) contributions under the Participation Programme.
A. Contributions for the implementation of a framework agreement

Organizations enjoying associate status with UNESCO and with which the Director-General has concluded a framework agreement may receive financial contributions either for the execution of activities included in UNESCO’s programme, or to fund their initiatives which supplement those of UNESCO. The granting of such contributions shall be subject to the following conditions:

(a) the financial contribution must be included in a specific General Conference resolution in relation to the Draft Programme and Budget of UNESCO. Once they are approved by the General Conference, the above-mentioned activities and the corresponding financial contribution shall be the subject of an exchange of letters between the parties;

(b) the beneficiary organization must submit to UNESCO an analytical report with detailed financial statement in respect of UNESCO’s contribution for the implementation of the framework agreement, as well as a qualitative report of the result obtained. The disbursement of financial contributions for further cooperation shall be subject to the approval by UNESCO of the report on the activities carried out during the preceding period.

B. Other contracts for the execution of UNESCO’s programme

Whenever the Director-General deems it necessary for the proper execution of UNESCO’s programme, he/she may conclude with non-governmental organizations a contract for the execution of activities forming part of the programme adopted by the General Conference. Such contracts may also be concluded with the organizations referred to in section VIII.2.A above.

C. Financial contributions under the Participation Programme

NGO partners of UNESCO may submit requests under the Participation Programme in accordance with the relevant resolution of the Programme and Budget (C/5). The corresponding financial contributions are subject to the General Conference resolution governing the Participation Programme.

IX. Use of the UNESCO name, logo and patronage

Patronage and use of the name, acronym and logo of UNESCO for particular or special events/activities may be granted to any non-governmental organizations in conformity with the Directives concerning the use of the name, acronym, logo and Internet domain names of UNESCO adopted by the General Conference and currently in force.

X. Periodic review of the partnership

1. The Director-General shall provide in his/her periodic reports to the governing bodies, in particular on the execution of the programme adopted by the General Conference, information on the main aspects of cooperation between UNESCO and NGO partners.

2. Every four years at the General Conference the Director-General shall present a report on the changes that have taken place in the list of NGO partners and on the assistance they have provided to UNESCO in its work, together with an evaluation of the results. This report shall, in particular, contain a list of organizations whose lack of collaboration has resulted in the automatic termination of their partnership with UNESCO, in accordance with these Directives.

XI. Collective cooperation with NGO partners

1. International Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations

   1.1 UNESCO NGO partners under these Directives (in consultative or associate status) shall hold a conference every two years to review the state of cooperation with UNESCO, conduct collective consultations on the main lines of UNESCO’s programme, and facilitate cooperation between organizations having common interests. This global forum shall, in particular, enable the Director-General to gather advice and suggestions from non-governmental organizations that are UNESCO’s partners in the priority fields of its programme, especially regarding the Director-General’s preliminary proposals on UNESCO’s Draft Programme and Budget, including the guidance provided by the Executive Board (see section VII).

   1.2 The International Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations shall elect its Chairperson in accordance with the procedures established by its rules of procedure. It shall also elect a NGO-UNESCO Liaison Committee made up of 10 NGO partners (four with associate status and six with consultative status). All of the regions, as defined by UNESCO, shall be represented by at least one NGO partner having its headquarters in that region. The Chairperson of the International Conference shall also chair the NGO-UNESCO Liaison Committee, and shall be elected for a non-renewable two-year term of office.

2. NGO-UNESCO Liaison Committee

   2.1 The NGO-UNESCO Liaison Committee’s role between meetings of the International Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations shall be to:

   (a) represent the interests of all the NGO partners with regard to UNESCO;

   (b) take all necessary steps to ensure the proper functioning and efficiency of the partnership between the community of NGO partners and UNESCO;

   (c) ensure the appropriate exchange of information with the non-governmental community it represents and, in this connection, promote consultation among NGOs at all levels;

1 Such framework arrangements shall be concluded according to a standard model.
(d) implement the resolutions adopted by the International Conference of Non-Governmental Organizations and make preparations, in consultation with the Director-General, for the subsequent session of the International Conference, including, for the first session of the International Conference, its draft rules of procedure;

(e) ensure that the opinions of NGOs taken collectively are reflected by UNESCO in the preparation of its draft programme;

(f) contribute to preparations for the debates of the Executive Board’s Committee on Non-Governmental Partners, in particular by promoting, as far as possible, the participation of a large number of NGOs;

(g) organize, in consultation with the UNESCO Secretariat, a twice-yearly NGO Forum on a UNESCO priority issue.

2.2 UNESCO’s Secretariat shall provide the NGO-UNESCO Liaison Committee with a financial contribution, the amount of which shall be determined at the beginning of each biennium in the work plan of the Secretariat service concerned. This contribution shall supplement the Liaison Committee’s own resources.

2.3 The premises and secretariat facilities necessary for the meetings of the International Conference and for the work of the NGO-UNESCO Liaison Committee shall, as far as possible, be provided free of charge by the Director-General. UNESCO’s technical services will facilitate appropriately the NGO-UNESCO Liaison Committee meetings by setting up video-conferencing.

3. Collective consultations on specific subjects

Collective consultations on specific subjects may be organized by the Secretariat with specialized NGOs, to ensure their contribution to the development and implementation of certain of UNESCO’s priority programmes.

XII. Transitional measures

1. The Executive Board shall be informed, at its 189th session, of the decisions taken by the Director-General that lie within her competence, and shall be informed for decision of matters within its own competence under these Directives. NGOs shall be informed accordingly of the decisions taken concerning them.

2. Agreements or exchanges of letters on general cooperation between UNESCO and NGOs other than those enjoying associate status shall end on 31 December 2012 after notification by UNESCO.

3. The practical arrangements for financial contributions provided for in section VIII.2.A shall take effect from the 37th session of the General Conference.

ANNEX

Joint statement of the Chairpersons of the five intergovernmental/international scientific programmes and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission to the Director-General and the General Conference at its 36th session

International Basic Science Programme (IBSP)
International Geoscience Programme (IGCP)
International Hydrological Programme (IHP)
Man and the Biosphere Programme (MAB)
Management of Social Transformations Programme (Most)
Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC)

Developed through consultation between The Chairpersons
(Paris, 1 November 2011)

The Chairpersons of the five UNESCO intergovernmental and international scientific programmes, and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, together referred to as ISPs, welcome the continued support of UNESCO for international collaborative research, development and capacity-building in the sciences. Considering that the world is facing major global changes: accelerating environmental degradation, loss of biodiversity, water scarcity, pollution, and emerging impacts of a changing climate and recognizing that all of these challenges impede efforts to eradicate poverty and achieve an equitable society, we commend the Director General’s support of developing nations, the role of women in science, and the future of our planet. We have taken note of the overall restructuring of the Organization, including new cross-cutting themes, both at the UNESCO level such as climate change and SIDS and within the two science sectors, namely science education, engineering, natural disasters and biodiversity in the Natural Sciences and social inclusion, social innovation and social impacts of global environmental change in Social and Human Sciences. The ISPs with their inherently interdisciplinary character can contribute significantly towards articulating the work of these cross-cutting themes to serve Member States in a manner that generates tangible results for scientists, policy-makers, politicians and other stakeholders, including local and indigenous communities.

We would like to highlight the important contributions the UNESCO scientific programmes have made over their years of operation, while continuing to look ahead. We have expanded the extent of projects within, and strengthened the role of researchers from developing Member States. We have supported new and young talents including an increased representation of women on advisory boards and within projects. Further, many of the projects we have promoted have a strong social, environmental and economic component to their objectives and thus contributing towards global sustainable development goals and objectives. We look forward to continuing development of UNESCO’s programmes in the natural and social sciences for the benefit of all sectors of society.

In 2010, IOC celebrated its 50th anniversary. This year (2011), MAB is commemorating its 40th anniversary and next year, IGCP will celebrate its 40th anniversary. The IHP will hold its 20th intergovernmental Council in 2012, 37 years since its establishment. These milestones in the history of the Programmes challenge them to continue to be innovative and relevant, guided by efforts to contribute towards the attainment of Millennium Development Goals, the preparations for Rio+20 (2012) and its follow-on activities and the United Nations Decade for Sustainable Development which is due to come to a close in 2014.

Fully conscious that our Statement comes at a crucial time for the Organization, we wish to stress that strengthening UNESCO’s intergovernmental and international programmes in the natural and social sciences is one of the major indispensable means to enable the Organization to contribute significantly to global actions in the various domains of its mandate. UNESCO with its five sectors of intervention has a unique advantage in the advantage to foster interdisciplinary approaches which are the most appropriate for supporting the multiple dimensions of green societies and sustainable development. A new vision for global sustainability must foster innovative and creative development models and practices that help both developed and developing countries transform current approaches and practices. In this transformation, science is crucial.

Within this framework we would like to outline some of our future goals and challenges:

1. The five Science Programmes of UNESCO together with IOC provide exceptional, direct links between UNESCO and the global scientific community. Science is crucial to improving the human condition and for combating poverty, environmental degradation, water scarcity, natural disasters and developing new and alternative energy solutions for the future. We look forward to obtaining the necessary financial and political support from the Director-General and the Member States to enhance UNESCO’s role in the development of global collaboration in the sciences. Raising funds from major global environmental donors, such as the Global Environment Facility, and channelling those funds efficiently to the end-users while cutting down on bureaucratic processes should be one of the major priorities of the Organization.

2. Dissemination of knowledge is a crucial aspect of UNESCO science projects. Since their inception, the scientific programmes have supported many collaborative projects that have generated scientific policy relevant recommendations to Member States and the scientific community. We seek to enhance the flow of scientific results and, especially, to improve the accessibility of these results to the public and to schools and universities by the continued enhancement of UNESCO’s online information portals.
UNESCO's projects also take on some of the big questions of science, elucidating aspects of the deep oceans, the Earth's inaccessible interior, and the processes at the outer limits of our atmosphere. Such fundamental science often relies on theoretical modelling with contributions from multiple disciplines in geographically disparate regions. In some cases, the results of such projects may have no immediate economic impact but they serve to broaden humanity's fundamental understanding of the structure and operation of our planet and yield data necessary for management of the global environment and future exploration and exploitation of resources. We look forward to UNESCO's continuing support of fundamental research.

UNESCO's longstanding and unique mandate for the basic sciences that the Executive Board reviewed and presented to this General Conference makes the development of the International Basic Sciences Programme (IBSP) particularly important for the new Medium-Term Strategy 2014-2019, and it calls on Member States, together with relevant UNESCO's ISPs, for stronger support and determined cooperation in the building up of their national capacities in science and science education. IBSP is concentrating its activity on a few major, highly visible and much needed actions, in particular:

- capacity-building, including networks of laboratories, centres of excellence and electronic scientific repositories;
- science teaching, including special training of teachers to efficiently transmit knowledge to other teachers;
- Science for peace (e.g. the SESAME project).

The International Geoscience Programme IGCP is the only existing worldwide network of international cooperation in geological sciences. The increased requirements for resources, e.g. groundwater, rare earth elements and heavy metals, have shown that science must operate in an environmentally conscious manner to mitigate the effects of exploration for and exploitation of these resources. Our science programmes have specifically supported programmes with these objectives, especially within Africa and developing countries and we plan to continue with these priorities. A global knowledge of the Earth Science is increasingly needed also in the study of climate change which is the biggest threat humankind has ever faced and by studying past climatic conditions we can provide decision-makers with important tools to mitigate consequences of global warming. The IGCP programme provides several thousands of scientists from about 150 countries with a multi-disciplinary platform to exchange knowledge and methodology on geological problems of global importance. This generates a vast amount of research data resulting in several hundred scientific publications, maps and databases and, not to forget, the outreach to society through popular scientific publications and discovery channel productions. However, all this is achieved with very limited resources. Further support for IGCP will provide the basis for a better equilibrium between human society and our home planet as our knowledge of the Earth System is our insurance policy for the future of our planet.

The International Hydrological Programme (IHP) is the only intergovernmental programme of the United Nations system devoted to freshwater research, water resources management, and education and capacity-building. Noting that in less than 25 years, two-thirds of the world’s population will be living in water-stressed countries, the challenging task of securing water for all users and managing the resource in a sustainable manner, particularly in arid regions, becomes a crucial priority in the sustainable development agenda. This critical situation is aggravated by evolving climatic changes and accelerated pressures created by imbalanced socio-economic development, changes in consumption patterns and lifestyles, and increasing population in urban areas. UNESCO’s IHP response to these global water challenges is built around its specialized areas of expertise providing policy advice on: adapting to the impacts of global changes on river basins and aquifer systems; strengthening water governance for sustainability; water scarcity and arid zones; water education for sustainable development; cooperation and conflict prevention; and international waters management. UNESCO advocates building green societies based on a global culture of sustainability and the efficient management of our scarce water resources.

The visionary and innovative spirit of the Man and the Biosphere (MAB) Programme is the essence and the driving force that have kept it so relevant and lively after 40 years. By placing human beings in the centre of ecological issues, MAB constantly keeps pace with emerging environmental, scientific and societal issues. We strongly believe that the ISP’s objectives of addressing the twenty-first century global challenges that our planet is facing – such as climate change, water management, maintenance of ecosystem services, and natural disasters risk reduction or urbanization – can be fostered by acting collectively. In that regard, the World Network of Biosphere Reserves provides a unique set of learning sites for all of us to shape and to implement the sustainable development concept within our Organization and beyond.

UNESCO’s Management of Social Transformations Programme seeks to act on social challenges of global significance through the strengthening of linkages between research and policies from a transformative perspective. By preparing, nurturing and advocating for systematic dialogue between the scientific and policy communities, MOST promotes research and action for collective knowledge development, with a view to tearing down boundaries between different professional cultures and making concrete contributions to the construction of more equitable societies. Under this objective, MOST adopted two priority themes, based on compatibility of social, economic and environmental goals at all levels, with social equity and social justice as an overriding goal. First, MOST’s work on “social inclusion” is to be an essential feature of fighting poverty, combating inequality and promoting empowerment founded on the protection and promotion of fundamental human rights. Such social investment ultimately creates employment opportunities, especially for youth and those in need. The interdependence of notions such as social inclusion, environmental sustainability, and economic development is also well illustrated by MOST’s second priority theme that focuses on the “Social Transformations arising from Global Environmental Change”. MOST’s core mandate is:
– to identify which interdisciplinary research is needed for the understanding and anticipation of social transformations,

– to use participatory action research for the co-development of knowledge and its use in transformative action,

– to build interactive knowledge bases by integrating contributions from all levels; and thus help policy actors and institutions shape collective responses to the combined crises of environmental, energy, food and financial/economic disorders.

9. The Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of UNESCO (IOC) is the sole United Nations organization specializing in ocean-related science, services and capacity development. It has been carrying out these responsibilities for more than 50 years. This role has supported the objectives of United Nations Conference on Environment and Development and World Summit on Sustainable Development, notably in developing and coordinating for societal use a global ocean observing system to forecast coastal and marine conditions, early warning and mitigation systems for tsunamis and other sea-level related hazards, assessments of ocean and coastal environments and resources, and national and local capacity development in marine science and transfer of technology for the sustainable management of ocean uses and their resources. The IOC’s role in contributing to sound scientific research, systematic observations, and reliable services for effective management of human activities in marine and coastal areas is a key factor of sustainable development and poverty alleviation. Ocean issues have to be considered in the main outcome document of Rio+20; therefore, IOC has strongly engaged in the preparation process of the Conference to highlight the role of oceans in sustainable development and to raise awareness of each and every one on the crucial need to preserve our Oceans.

In conclusion, we, the Chairpersons of the ISPs agree to:

10. Continue our support to the Director-General in her efforts to revitalize the role of the sciences within UNESCO and the broader international community in our promotion and elucidation of green societies and sustainable development. We look forward to close contact and collaboration with the newly established High-level Panel on Science for Sustainable Development and look forward to having representatives of the ISPs, who are themselves experts, to be involved in the Panel’s work.

11. Explore ways for streamlining the procedures for funding applications and providing funding decisions.

12. Promote awareness of UNESCO’s mandate as the lead United Nations organization in international scientific development especially in the framework of Rio+20 and to promote the public visibility and accessibility of the results from its natural and social sciences projects.

I. Reports of the Legal Committee

FIRST REPORT

1. The Legal Committee elected by acclamation Ms Victoria Hallum (New Zealand) as Chairperson, Mr Jude Mathooko (Kenya) as Vice-Chairperson, and Mr Pierre Michel Eisemann (France) as Rapporteur.

Examination of communications of the admissibility of draft resolutions proposing the adoption of amendments to the Draft Programme and Budget for 2012-2013 (36 C/5 and 36 C/5 Add.)

2. Since its 29th session, the General Conference has adopted a procedure for processing draft resolutions proposing amendments to the Draft Programme and Budget. This procedure derives from an amendment introduced into its Rules of Procedures (see Rules 80 and 81).

3. The procedure established provides that the sponsors of those draft resolutions that at first sight appear inadmissible in the opinion of the Director-General may appeal to the General Conference, through the Legal Committee, to rule at last instance on their admissibility.

4. An Explanatory Note was prepared by the Legal Committee in November 2000 and communicated to all Member States so that they could submit draft resolutions of this nature meeting the requisite criteria. That note was completed by two “finalizations” adopted by the Legal Committee at its November 2002 meeting and by the General Conference at its 33rd session, respectively.

5. Those criteria were followed by the Legal Committee when it examined the only draft resolution deemed inadmissible by the Director-General. After listening to the representative of the country that had sponsored the draft resolution, the Legal Committee recommended that draft resolution (MS/DR.47) be declared inadmissible because it did not concern one of the operative paragraphs of the Draft Programme and Budget for 2012-2013.

6. The Legal Committee invited the representative of the country that sponsored the draft resolution proposing an improvement to the wording of the narrative part of the Draft Programme and Budget to continue the dialogue with the Director-General in order to achieve that result by means other than the submission of a draft resolution.

SECOND REPORT

Summary of the reports received by Member States on the measures taken for the implementation of the 1970 Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property

1. The Legal Committee considered the summary of the reports received from Member States on the measures taken to implement the 1970 Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property.

2. The Committee took note of the summary supplemented by the comments made on the subject by the Committee on Conventions and Recommendations (CR) at the 187th session of the Executive Board. It also took note of additional information provided by the representatives of the Director-General on specific steps taken by the Secretariat to receive the required reports and to follow up States’ additional comments to the Organization within the framework of the consultation (paragraph 10 of the summary of reports received).

3. While stressing the difficulty experienced by some States Parties in drawing up the list of cultural property provided for under Article 5 of the 1970 Convention owing to thefts and illegal excavations, a Member of the Committee stressed that although States Parties could set terms of protection for their cultural property nationally, they could not amend the terms of the Convention without recourse to the provisions of Article 25 of the Convention.

4. The Committee adopted formal amendments to the text of the draft resolution contained in paragraph 9 of document 36 C/25. (36 C/Resolution 102)

It also took note of the additional information provided by the Assistant Director-General for Communication and Information.

3. After recalling the importance of the promotion of multilingualism, the Committee stressed that, pursuant to 34 C/Resolution 87, monitoring the 2003 Recommendation was a matter of priority.

4. With regard to reports received after the deadline, the Committee considered that the Secretariat should demonstrate flexibility and make reference to the reports in the working document, especially since several months had passed between the examination of the consolidated report by the Executive Board and its transmission to the General Conference.

5. The Committee adopted a formal amendment to the draft resolution contained in paragraph 10 of 36 C/26. (36 C/Resolution 58)

A Summary of the general policy debate: Leaders’ Forum

26-27 October 2011

How does UNESCO contribute to building a culture of peace and to sustainable development?

Summary of the debate

“There is no route to peace, peace is the route” (M. Gandhi)

On 26 and 27 October 2011, nine Heads of State and Government and 56 Ministers and Heads of Delegation participated in the UNESCO Leaders’ Forum of the General Conference together with addresses by the President of the General Conference, the Chairperson of the Executive Board and the Director-General. In a lively debate, participants expressed their views, shared their countries’ experiences and made recommendations on the importance of building a culture of peace and promoting sustainable development and UNESCO’s role in these areas. Emphasizing the timeliness of the Leaders’ Forum and the relevance of UNESCO’s mandate, the speakers identified a number of relevant issues that should be taken into account when preparing the next C/4 and C/5 documents. These are summarized below along a number of cross-cutting thematic axes:

The global setting: emerging challenges to peace and development

An era of multiple global crises aggravated by a crisis of values

Globalization has placed humanity into a global village. It has created an unprecedented rapprochement of cultures and peoples, and has been accompanied in recent years with significant and welcome improvements. Many countries have experienced sustained growth and trade in recent decades; science, technology, and innovation have progressed apace; populations have made giant strides towards quality education; and communications have become a driving force of globalization. However, progress remains incomplete, fragile and unequal – risking serious divides. The world is affected by a series of global crises, including the economic and financial crisis, the environmental crisis, and most notably climate change, and the food crisis. Above all, progress is hampered by the persistence of poverty, the steady growth of inequalities, the erosion of social cohesion in many countries, and the growing degradation in the world’s environment. Migration of people has become a common feature of contemporary life, creating fluid cultural settings worldwide and the need to reconcile cultural diversity and social cohesion within more and more diversified societies. The rich potential of cultural diversity and intercultural dialogue remains largely unexploited. In many countries, societies have witnessed the development of various forms of exclusion, discrimination and marginalization that can lead to violence and extremist acts. The world remains far from the ideal of social cohesion based on shared global ethics. Indeed, while material considerations dominate the international discourse, there is a need to acknowledge that the present crises are aggravated by a crisis of values that can be solved only if the world sets itself firmly on the path to a culture of peace and sustainable development.

Two sides of the same coin

As human-centred approaches to address current global challenges, a culture of peace and sustainable development are intrinsically linked and mutually reinforcing, peace cannot be realized lastingly without sustainable development and vice versa. Those two intertwined paths are indispensable to respond to today’s complex multiple crises. They also influence good governance, neither repressive nor corrupted, based on human rights, the rule of law and democratic principles. In fact, peace must not be considered as the mere absence of war, but as an environment where human rights are observed and where every person has the possibility to realize his or her potential. For its part, sustainable development must be seen as a dynamic and complex process with immediate and long-term needs to fulfil. Both the culture of peace and sustainable development are profoundly ethical challenges. Core elements of peace and sustainable development are respect of life, human rights, dignity, freedom, stability, social harmony, duty of forgiveness, justice, tolerance, mutual respect, solidarity, gender equality, and lasting and sincere dialogue.

Peace is sacred, but cannot be taken for granted

Peace – as a right and as a duty – is a political, civic, ethical and pedagogical imperative, indeed a basis for moral solidarity of humankind. As such, it contributes to harmonious coexistence, social cohesion, and a strong sense of belonging locally and globally. But peace is always fragile. It can disappear at once, even in countries where it has a long tradition. Peace should not be taken for granted. It is an ongoing process requiring constant engineering, vigilance and active participation by all. It also... encompasses a long-term vision, which necessitates a permanent and firm commitment and entails a blend of traditional and contemporary modalities to understand the roots of conflicts and the ways to mitigate violence. Peace is under threat owing to poverty, inequality and inequalities, injustice, unemployment, lack of opportunities, and young people’s vulnerability, especially in urban settings. A certain “romanticization” of violence through new media and games can be a particular threat to peace for youth. Humanity will not gain peace if we are blind to future gains and only conscious of immediate benefits. The proposition by the late President of Côte d’Ivoire, Félix Houphouët-Boigny in 1971 on the situation of African countries remains valid for all regions and countries: “Peace within the African States should be based on justice, tolerance, dialogue, respect for human dignity and the respect for freedom, equality between men.”

Prosperity as dignity: poverty is a violation of human rights

Poverty eradication and the promotion of equitable socio-economic growth are strategic paths on the road to a culture of peace and achieving sustainable development. People in dire economic situations are easily prey to polarization, extremism, violence and conflicts. In many developing and developed countries where young people constitute a significant proportion of the population, it has become crucial to foster environments where people can seize economic opportunities and seek dignity through employment. At the global level, both peace and sustainable development are indispensable for nations to work towards shared prosperity.

Gender equality – an imperative for peace and sustainable development

Gender equality is a paramount foundation for peace. There is a need to foster a non-violent struggle for women's rights, empowerment and political participation at all levels. Gender equality should not be developed only at the level of national or international leadership, but also at the local level, where the most difficult challenges to women's and girls' access to basic services, such as education and health are to be found. Women and girls are still denied the same opportunities as those afforded their male counterparts. Women and girls worldwide need to be empowered to develop their full potential, as a human right, a question of social justice, and as a precondition to genuine sustainable development. Attention to gender equality means also that the situation of young men should equally be addressed, especially when they come from disadvantaged backgrounds where they are exposed to violence and criminality.

Youth – the democratic pulse of contemporary societies

Youth, the democratic pulse of today’s world, must be empowered as actors for peace and inclusive sustainable development. Young women and men are agents for peace and benefit from it. Likewise, their role in development is strategic as they have a potential and energy that are near limitless. Youth want their critical voice to be heard. Too often, indeed, their potential is stifled as they bear the brunt of poverty, unemployment and exclusion. It is telling that the aspirations expressed by youth during the Arab Spring entail both a call for democracy and a claim to social dignity. Sustainability cannot be achieved when societies are unable to fulfil the socio-economic aspirations of the young women and men whom they have nonetheless educated at a huge cost. Youth education and employment should thus be given due attention – this will be one of the most pressing challenges for Africa, where 60% of the population is under 30. National strategies should prepare young people for actively participating and contributing to the improvement of their socio-economic environment in a sustainable way, notably through youth entrepreneurship skills programmes. A Special Youth Fund could also be created so as to help curb violence, discrimination and extremism through dialogue and knowledge sharing.

Pluralism, inclusive participation and social cohesion – foundations of democracy

A culture of peace and sustainable development rest on a common set of principles including democratic participation, social cohesion, the rule of law, justice, equity and human rights. Good governance is a key component of both. Supporting democratic processes and strengthening good governance require commitment from all stakeholders. To avoid social or generational conflicts, it is crucial to develop future-oriented approaches that take into account the needs and aspirations of all segments of societies, especially women, youth, and vulnerable populations. This endeavour should be supported with the development of specific indicators capturing social cohesion.

The need for sustainable global governance

While globalization offers opportunities to an increasing number of countries and individuals, a number of countries, both in the developed and the developing world, are exposed to the negative and adverse effects of unsustainable forms of development. In this context, there is a need for strategies to address the despair of peoples who find themselves isolated and without prospects for advancement, jobs and prosperity. Today's great challenge is to rethink global governance in an inclusive manner. Governance in the era of globalization should have a diverse and human face and prove capable of reducing economic, social, technological, cultural as well as knowledge and digital divides. This would be best achieved through projects arising from cooperation between developed, emerging and developing countries. As for the most vulnerable countries, that are those most affected by the various crises, their development requires adapting the present structures and mechanisms of the multilateral system. It is a responsibility for all.

Dialogue, solidarity and creativity – a humanist approach for the twenty-first century

Despite the current context of global crises, we should look towards the future with optimism and commit to address challenges by means of genuine dialogue. The multiple crises are a symptom of the fact that we are experiencing the emergence of a new world that is more interconnected, complex and diverse. Problems must be approached from a humanist perspective based on the respect for human rights and cultural diversity and on the practice of non-violence, tolerance and dialogue. It is only with such a moral compass that the ties of solidarity between peoples and within societies can be created, and the lasting conditions for peace and sustainable development be laid. The challenge is to enlarge the common denominator of values and principles that bind us all together as human beings, while guarding against the pressures of uniformity. In that light, humanism in the twenty-first century should rest upon a broad conception of tolerance, pertaining not only to social and intercultural relations but also to openness with respect to creative ideas – affecting ethical attitudes, consumption patterns, business models and ground-breaking technologies. This humanism based on dialogue, solidarity and creativity has the potential to greatly facilitate the invention of unprecedented solutions to the current world’s problems.

Focus for future actions

Participants in the Leaders’ Forum reaffirmed that UNESCO’s mandate and expertise in education, the sciences, culture, communication and information give the Organization the most valuable and appropriate means to enhance international cooperation and work with Member States towards building a culture of peace and ensuring sustainable development. With an intersectoral and interdisciplinary perspective that cuts across its five sectors, UNESCO can support its Member States in developing holistic strategies to strike a harmonious balance between the interrelated requirements of the economy, society and environmental stewardship:

Quality education – a key lever for peace and development

Education is perhaps the most effective lever to building a culture of peace and sustainable development. Education should be seen as a comprehensive framework resting on four pillars: learning to know, learning to do, learning to be and learning to live together. Education must be accessible to all, of high quality and relevance and must contribute to changing the way we think and behave in order to achieve a culture of peace and a sustainable future. In that sense, peace education and Education for Sustainable Development (ESD) are corollaries. Literacy is a prerequisite for peace and human, as well as socio-economic, development. In the context of the global financial crisis, special attention must be paid to the needs of the most vulnerable and marginalised populations and of countries in conflict or post-conflict and post-disaster situations. Community ownership of education could be achieved by empowering populations from the grassroots level, by reaching out to the marginalized, paying special attention to women and girls. More generally, education and lifelong learning are key to empowering youth and adults to become responsible citizens actively contributing to building a culture of peace and to sustainable development. To this effect, Member States should develop and apply guidelines, teaching and training materials, including for teachers, designed to mainstream the respect for human rights, solidarity, honesty, peace and democracy.

Education for sustainable development – a key component of values education

Progress towards the Education for All (EFA) goals and the education-related Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) must be complemented with UNESCO’s strong leadership by expanding the scope and outreach of Education for Sustainable Development (ESD), which focuses on the knowledge and the attitudes marked by an array of new economic, social and environmental challenges. Education systems and policies, school curricula, teacher education and training programmes, literacy and adult education programmes must be founded on the principles of solidarity, inclusion, respect for human rights, intercultural dialogue and cultural diversity, environmental awareness, tolerance, negotiation, entrepreneurship and creativity. The intersectoral and interdisciplinary dimensions of education for sustainable development, which has deep ties with technical and vocational training and education (TVET) is bound to engender new ways of thinking, new social and ethical attitudes, and innovative responses aimed at fostering sustainable development and low-carbon green practices. Consequently, national capacity in TVET should be reformed and strengthened in order to help young people develop relevant skills. UNESCO should support changes in lifestyles, attitudes, behaviours conducive to sustainable development and ensure coherence of the sustainable development mechanisms and policies at national, regional and international levels.

Civic education @ the crossroads of peace education and ESD

Education must provide for the acquisition of content and the transmission of values. Civic education can be seen as a means to jointly address the requirements of the culture of peace and sustainable development, which constitute essential components in the moral compass of the citizens of the next century. Learning environments must be conceived so as to foster a culture of non-violence, mutual respect and dialogue. Consideration should be given to arts education and to sport as an educational instrument fostering predispositions to dialogue, to respect for rules and to selflessness. Multilingual education, human rights and peace education, cross-border education and intercultural education at all levels, in formal and informal education, could nurture cross-fertilization of cultures, and thus bolster knowledge on cultural diversity and appreciation of other people’s cultures. Comprehensive curriculum reform should be supported so as to integrate education for peace and human rights, civics and intercultural education, as well as remembrance education, also to enhance knowledge about cultural diversity and appreciation of other people’s cultures. A “universal” curriculum — expressing universal values spreading across all cultures – could be designed as a cornerstone in educating for peace and tolerance.

Scientific innovation and cooperation for peace and sustainable development

Science and technology have an important role to play in providing solid responses in the peace-development context. Environmental challenges such as climate change, biodiversity losses or oceanic degradations will require increased investments into science, research and technology, especially through innovative projects, such as the use of satellite imagery to manage resources, the survey of individual ecosystems and the strengthening of the knowledge base for renewable energies, in particular solar energy. Other key aspects of sustainable development are the effective management of natural resources as well as the connection between cultural and biological diversity, largely illustrated in the rich practices of local and indigenous people on all continents. All those dimensions call for new approaches to involve cross-sectoral coordination, and integration of environmental and social concerns into all development processes. Providing science-based knowledge, building science capacities for research, training and the popularization of science in development-oriented areas, as well as sharing the transfer of scientific information, are collective and ethical responsibilities, bearing in mind, the borderless nature of the global environmental crises. The culture of peace should go hand in hand with a culture of conservation. UNESCO could support governments in the design and formulation of science, technology and innovation policies, which must also include ethical dimensions as well as be geared towards intensifying efforts in the field of disaster management and early warning systems, which are indispensable to the social and economic resilience of countries.

Sustainable development – a necessity for countries with special needs, especially in Africa

While the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and the Agenda 21 have been recognized as strategic ways to lay the foundations for sustainable development, the current global crises are jeopardizing the capacity of developing countries to attain those objectives. This has dire consequences for priority groups of countries with recognized special needs, such as the least developing countries (LDCs), the small island developing States (SIDS) and most countries in Africa. For instance, Small Island Developing States face ever-increasing challenges resulting from climate change, which devastates crops, habitations and coastlines. As for Africa, its paradox is the extensive wealth of its human and natural resources on the one hand, and the extreme poverty of large parts of its population on the other. In this era of globalization, the world cannot genuinely prosper with profound inequalities between regions, which eventually threaten social justice, stability, security and peace. This is another reason why it is imperative to anchor the principles of sustainable development in all dimensions of international cooperation and collaboration. UNESCO and governments should take advantage of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development (UNCSD or Rio+20) to be held in Rio in 2012 to rethink policies and approaches towards sustainable development. This should include addressing issues pertaining to global ocean governance, the critical importance of water management, green economies and green societies, with particular attention to the situations of countries with priority needs.

Facilitating peace and understanding between cultures

UNESCO is the prime forum for dialogue involving a vibrant and interdependent humanity aiming at shared peace and well-being. Without intercultural and interreligious dialogues, as well as good will and mutual understanding, no culture of peace can emerge. Building on its work on global and regional histories or the slave route, UNESCO should encourage individuals and communities to explore their cultures as well as the cultures of other nations. Culture is a major area where society meets itself, where it discovers itself as well as where it connects with Otherness. It is apparent that issues such as cultural citizenship, cultural rights and cultural creation are deeply interlinked. Thus, a culture of peace cannot develop if one’s own culture as well as the others’ is not known and acknowledged or if other cultures are kept at a distance. This means, in particular, that efforts should be made to highlight the assets of the diversity of cultures that cohabit within a single country. UNESCO could assist countries in exploring what cultural resources they may hold to construct peace, notably domestic peace, on an endogenous basis in line with their past history and their aspirations. Particular attention could be paid to the teaching of wars and violent eras as a catalyst for a remembrance and reconciliation education intended to disseminate the message “No more war”. Suggestions were made to consider the launching of a Decade of Common Heritage intended to promote the universal values underpinning the diversity of cultural heritages. Member States should develop capacities to translate the normative instruments related to culture into policies and cultural strategies.

Culture for development, culture for peace

The positive power of culture for development is increasingly acknowledged – but success in this area is possible only if countries can genuinely promote culture in the framework of the market economy, lest it get a mere commercial commodity swallowed by a pure logic of profit maximization. Thus, it is important to clarify the interlinkages between culture, peace and development and support initiatives to bring these to bear. The dialogue between tradition and modernity is constitutive of cultures. It calls for identifying a balance between the past, the present and the future. UNESCO should be called to support Member States in their efforts to promote contemporary art projects and emphasize the role of artistic creation for human rights, sustainable development, dialogue and tolerance. UNESCO’s expertise in culture and heritage is a unique asset, notably its extensive normative action related to the different culture conventions. In the long run, the cultural component must be incorporated into national development strategies and cultural policies must be developed, together with advocacy for the inclusion of cultural dimensions in policy-making and public endeavours.

Building peace through reconciliation between and within nations

Reconciliation should be seen as a key issue that can contribute to a culture of peace between nations, particularly within regions that have been torn by conflicts. Reconciliation is also a necessity to help societies heal the wounds of past and ongoing internecine conflicts. Finally, reconciliation as a plank to everyday peace should be envisaged as a process that goes beyond the resolution of armed conflict, as is the case, for example, when electoral processes have generated distrust in the midst of society and threaten to fragment it. Building peace democratically is a deeply ethical process, which depends on a balance of forgiveness and justice, and which may be achieved through dialogue and via platforms such as reconciliation commissions. The principles and values of reconciliation could also be disseminated through a global campaign against all forms of discrimination and exclusion at the local, national, regional and international levels.

Media and the social media – vehicle for a culture of peace and sustainable development

In an era of unprecedented interconnectedness and instantaneous information flows, the media can serve as a bridge between all cultures and societies, if they espouse the principles and values underpinning the culture of peace and sustainable development: the rejection of hateful propaganda, intolerance, discrimination, prejudice and extremism, and the promotion of dialogue, as well as balanced, evidence- and research-based information. The media, including the social media, should be harnessed as part of the education system, safeguarding the past and forging the future. In this regard, the Memory of the World programme, together with the culture-related 1972 and 2003 Conventions constitute a framework for the preservation of our heritage. The free, pluralistic and independent media are crucial in promoting good governance. Media literacy should be mainstreamed in curricula to better prepare future citizens to take an active part in the public life of their societies. The media’s role is also crucial in disaster risk reduction and preparedness, as well as for national reconciliation and pluralism. UNESCO should enhance its action in the areas of the promotion of freedom of expression, free and pluralistic media, inclusive knowledge societies, the bridging of digital divides, and access to information. Initiatives should be launched jointly with the relevant stakeholders to harness the new social media.

The way forward for UNESCO – What more can UNESCO and its partners do? A new global commitment to make the best use of its transformative power in order to provide coherent political responses and renew global governance

The quest for everyday peace

We need a human-centred approach to peace building and prevention of conflicts and violence. UNESCO should mainstream the culture of peace in all its programmes, bearing in mind that a culture of peace must also be effective in the form an everyday peace, a peace of which all the individual and collective members of society are the craftsmen. This is a new humanism, which requires participation and inclusion of all, as well as cultural and intellectual cooperation in a global community fully aware of the transformative power of education, science and culture. Living together in a globalized, complex and diverse village calls for UNESCO to strengthen such values as honesty, solidarity among peoples, mutual benefits and mutual respect.

Solidarity through partnerships for peace and sustainable development

Partnerships are strategic assets in the global efforts aimed at a culture of peace and sustainable development. These values are integrated into global agendas set by the Member States of the United Nations. Yet, they were never meant to be implemented by governments and intergovernmental organizations alone. Peace and development cannot happen exclusively from the top down: those agendas can be implemented only if they are fully owned by a wide diversity of partners, allowing for the inclusion and participation of all. Consequently, the whole UNESCO community must be mobilized – including civil society organizations, youth organizations, women’s organizations, other international organizations – and public-private partnerships must be strengthened and further developed. UNESCO also is invited to use its convening power to organize events similar to the Leaders’ Forum at the global and the regional levels.

Towards a new societal paradigm

The spirit of rich interventions at the Leaders’ Forum could be resumed by pointing to the need for acquiring (i) “green” reflexes and attitudes constituting a global ecological consciousness in the face of unprecedented pace of climate change and environmental and ecological degradations and (ii) intercultural skills such as empathy, spontaneous solidarity and hospitality to reflect the diversity of contemporary societies in an active, honest and lasting dialogue.

There is an imperative need to adopt a holistic approach of policies regarding a culture of peace and sustainable development, best captured by the image of being the “two sides of the same coin”.

Only through an integrated agenda can this relationship be translated into meaningful targets and programmes. UNESCO’s fields of competence – education, the sciences, culture, and communication and information – if correctly used, are powerful vectors for human dignity, freedom, equality, mutual trust, shared responsibilities for the planet and for intercultural solidarity, values which are so ardently needed today to address humanity’s preoccupations and meet its aspirations.
I. Repositioning UNESCO to respond to a changing global context

A vast majority of Member States noted how the current global context has changed and that, in spite of new opportunities, new challenges have also emerged along with new risks. These include: persistent poverty, social disparities and inequality; insufficient access to quality education; population growth; climate change; the deterioration of the environment; the unsustainable use of freshwater and depletion of ocean resources; increasing cases of natural and human-induced disasters; gender inequality; youth unemployment; rising extremism, intolerance and violence. While these are global challenges that affect all countries, a number of speakers noted that developing countries and the poorest populations are the hardest hit. They suffer the most from the concurrent financial, energy, food and climate change crises, and have the least capacity to respond. Conflicts further exacerbate this situation, reinforcing inequalities, marginalization and desperation.

Member States noted that these multiple and convergent crises further accentuate the many challenges and obstacles faced by the international community in achieving the internationally agreed development goals, including the MDGs and EFA goals, by 2015, and in setting the world on the path to sustainable development. The relative stagnation of development aid hampers and risks rolling back progress that has been achieved by developing countries in this area. Some Member States urged UNESCO to develop innovative financing mechanisms, including for education, to bridge the development aid financing gaps and accelerate the achievement of these development goals, and that it should focus on achieving the MDG agenda, also beyond 2015.

Some Member States noted that the world’s global and financial structures have been put into question. The Director-General’s vision of a new humanism was seen as highly relevant to addressing some of these global issues. Many Member States emphasized that the challenges of our time only serve to underline the importance of dialogue among peoples and cultures based upon mutual respect and shared values, the pursuit of which lies at the heart of UNESCO’s mandate. The Director-General’s consolidated action plan to promote a culture of peace and non-violence was highlighted as an important means to promote dialogue and reconciliation and to act against all forms of discrimination, intolerance and racism. A number of Member States underscored the particularly important role of the Organization in promoting democracy, respect for human rights, social cohesion, and development in the aftermath of the Arab Spring. The Organization’s work to promote sustainable development as a prerequisite to developing a culture of peace was also highlighted, as was its contribution to Rio+20.

Many Member States expressed their appreciation for the commitment of the Director-General to reform UNESCO in order to increase its relevance and impact. Many delegates highlighted the importance of the follow-up to and the implementation of the recommendations of the Independent External Evaluation (IEE), both by the governing bodies and the Secretariat. The delegates acknowledged the steps already taken in this regard and welcomed the proposed actions for the future, as defined in the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group of the Executive Board and the Director-General’s Action Plan. They urged the Director-General to keep the momentum by continuing with the reforms while closely monitoring the follow-up.

II. UNESCO’s role and functions

In this global environment, Member States stressed that UNESCO’s role and mandate remains as relevant as ever, at the global, regional and national levels, and that it should keep focusing on its functions as a catalyst for international collaboration, a laboratory of ideas and a clearing house for cutting-edge thinking, a standard-setter, and a capacity-builder across the domains of science, education, culture and communication and information. UNESCO should continue to contribute to a culture of peace, to sustainable development and the eradication of poverty, to the expansion of quality educational opportunities for all, to the promotion of freedom of expression, to the preservation of culture and heritage, and to the mobilization of science to tackle the world’s problems, thereby helping the international community to respond to the challenges of the twenty-first century. Speakers emphasized the important role played by UNESCO in empowering people through knowledge. They felt that it should continue to play a role in creating space for the policy discussion of ethical issues in the areas of its mandate.

Several Member States noted that the Organization should better assert its leadership role in several areas of global governance, including education for all, and that it should develop future-oriented and innovative programmes to respond to emerging global challenges. Intersectorality was noted a key comparative advantage of UNESCO, and the Director-General was commended for her initiative to rationalize the number of intersectoral platforms and to provide these platforms with dedicated funding. It was also noted that the next Medium-Term Strategy should be organized around a limited number of intersectoral themes, and some suggested that this intersectoral approach needed also to be reflected in the organization of the Secretariat.

The important role played by UNESCO in conflict, post-conflict and post-disaster situations in education, culture, media and science was highlighted and appreciated by several Member States, who also stressed UNESCO’s unique ability to build the resilience of countries faced with these situations.
Some Member States encouraged UNESCO to devise a more effective consultation process with its Member States to identify the programmes whose ongoing value justifies their continuation.

III. Global priorities

Member States stressed that the world cannot genuinely and lastingly prosper when sharp inequalities exist between regions and within the same country. They considered that UNESCO should continue to accord priority to responding to the needs of Africa. They noted that special attention should also be given to the needs of priority groups of countries, including least developed countries, small islands developing States, and countries in post-conflict and post-disaster situations. Some Member States noted that SIDS were particularly vulnerable to the effects of climate change, and that more support was needed to implement the Mauritius Strategy. UNESCO’s work to promote disaster preparedness, mitigation and recovery and risk reduction was also noted as an important area in need of development. Greater attention must also be paid to gender equality, as a fundamental pillar for peace and sustainable development, in all areas of UNESCO’s action. Member States from all regions also highlighted the importance of mainstreaming youth in all of UNESCO’s programmes so as to enable them to participate fully in the social, political and economic development of their countries. Member States also mentioned the empowerment of youth as an important means of addressing problems of unemployment and countering rising levels of violence.

IV. Focus and concentration

Several Member States stressed the need for UNESCO to be very clear about where it can best add value, in times of crisis and fiscal austerity, and to concentrate its action on what it can deliver in the most effective and cost-efficient way. Many Member States commended the Director-General’s efforts to craft a C/5 framework based on zero nominal growth, which concentrates on a limited number of strategic objectives.

The Director-General’s work to reform the Organization and to make it more responsive to meeting the global challenges of the twenty-first century and more visible was highly appreciated. It was noted that reforming UNESCO is a shared responsibility between its governing bodies and the Secretariat, requiring a sustained and coordinated set of actions. Efforts to streamline business practices and free up resources to reinforce priority programs should be continued. Exit strategies for marginal and under-performing activities, alongside programme monitoring and evaluation mechanisms that are transparent to Member States should be developed and supported. Implementing the recommendations of the report of the independent external auditor and the Ad-Hoc Working Group set up for this purpose was deemed particularly important in these reform efforts.

V. Inter-agency coordination and outreach

UNESCO’s role in the United Nations system must be strengthened and greater coordination is needed with other United Nations organizations so as to minimize any potential overlap and build on synergies with other organizations. Speakers stressed that UNESCO should continue to contribute actively to UN reform, “Delivering as One” and harmonization processes at all levels, and ensure that the Organization’s vital contribution is reflected in United Nations programmes at the country level. A number of Member States voiced strong support for the proposed change in the programme cycles of the C/4 and C/5 documents so as to enable a better alignment with the Quadrennial Comprehensive Policy Review (QPCR) of operational activities by the United Nations General Assembly and enhanced possibilities for coordination with the organizations of the United Nations system. The net effect of these actions will take time to bear fruit, but UNESCO is heading in the right direction.

Member States urged UNESCO to further strengthen its internal and external communication channels and reinforce knowledge management across its programmes in order to better disseminate best practices and to address new and emerging issues. Member States also urged UNESCO to position itself closer to country needs and partners to ensure its relevance and impact. The role of the National Commissions, particularly in the context of the Participation Programme, was seen as an important contribution to this endeavor, and, as such, should be encouraged. The launch of the first phase of UNESCO’s field network reform, which will be rolled out on the African continent, was considered encouraging. A Member State recommended to upgrade over time UNESCO’s Pacific office in Apia to a multisectoral regional office with professional staff from each sector better equipped to cover the specific needs of the region.

VI. Strategic vision, emerging challenges and innovative programmes

Education

Speakers stressed that education is a human right and a public good. It is the foundation for building a culture of peace and ensuring sustainable development. Education must therefore remain UNESCO’s principal priority, with emphasis placed on the achievement of the EFA goals and the related MDGs. UNESCO’s role in leading EFA was reaffirmed, and a number of Member States urged UNESCO to enhance its action in that regard and demonstrate concrete results.

Several speakers reported significant progress in their countries towards achieving universal primary education and gender parity, at least at the primary level. However, they acknowledged that a number of challenges remain, and as the 2015 target was approaching, Member States called on UNESCO to strengthen its support for expanding access, improving equity and the quality of education and achieving gender equality at all levels, focusing on the most vulnerable and marginalized children and youth.

Delegates referred to different aspects of the quality of education that they considered essential for inclusive and equitable education systems and where they expected UNESCO to strengthen its cooperation: teacher training and professional development, review of curricula and the integration of human rights education and education for sustainable development in
Member States reaffirmed their support of the work of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC), in particular in scientific but also the ethical and social dimensions of climate change was highlighted. Requested UNESCO to continue its sustained efforts in supporting research and mobilizing the use of scientific knowledge for rural areas, and to facilitate sharing and exchange of good practices and successful initiatives in that domain among countries across the different regions.

Several delegates expressed their concern about the rising levels unemployment, especially among youth. Relevant curriculum and well-designed technical and vocational education and training programmes can help build bridges between education and the world of work. Delegates believed that UNESCO was best placed to work with Member States in these areas with the aim to ensuring the acquisition of the relevant competencies and skills development that would empower learners to become responsible citizens and take part actively in the building of their socio-economic environment and improving their well-being.

More efforts are required to link EFA and ESD agendas and ensure synergetic impact. A number of speakers also called for urgent action to address climate change issues through education. Indeed, many countries, particularly small island developing States (SIDS), are already dealing with the harmful economic and social effects of shifting weather patterns. Several delegates appreciated UNESCO’s focus, within the DESD and as part of the promotion of ESD in general, on climate change education and disaster risk reduction.

With only four years to go until the target date for achieving the goals set in Dakar, it was agreed that one of the most important tasks for UNESCO was to chart the course of action beyond 2015. Assessment of progress, both quantitative and qualitative should be carried out both at the global and national levels. The contribution of the EFA Global Monitoring Report and the work undertaken by UNESCO Institute for Statistics (UIS) in this respect were underscored.

Finally, as the world is witnessing an economic and financial crisis, a number of delegates expressed their concern for the erosion of progress achieved so far in achieving EFA. Investment in education must be maintained, both in order to sustain progress achieved thus far and to keep the world on track with regards to the EFA goals. The search and identification of new and innovative sources of financing of education was deemed necessary.

Natural sciences

Speakers stressed that science, technology and engineering have a key role to play in providing responses to the multi-faceted contemporary challenges of sustainable development and peace. In the light of the increased number of natural disasters and the devastating effects of climate change, in particular in the small islands developing States and in Africa, Member States requested UNESCO to continue its sustained efforts in supporting research and mobilizing the use of scientific knowledge for adaptation and mitigation of climate change, natural disasters risk reduction, integrated water management, and biodiversity conservation. The importance of further adopting a holistic and interdisciplinary approach, taking into consideration not only the scientific but also the ethical and social dimensions of climate change was highlighted.

Member States reaffirmed their support of the work of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC), in particular in relation to the establishment of the regional tsunami early warning systems, and urged for the setting-up of the tsunami alert system in the Caribbean region. The creation of an early warning system for floods was proposed. Given its success in promoting intrinsic linkages between people and nature, the MAB programme should be strengthened and actively promoted at the 2012 United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development (Rio+20), together with the initiatives related to the protection of forests. The role of transboundary biosphere reserves and the promotion of a “culture of conservation” were highlighted. In the same vein, the International Hydrological Programme (IHP) has a key role to play and the establishment of an International Fund for the Preservation of Ice and of an International Glaciology Center were proposed.

Member States expressed satisfaction with regard to UNESCO’s work in the field in science policy, in particular for the benefit of African countries, and encouraged further efforts in supporting Member States in the formulation of STI policy for sustainable development, the strengthening of international cooperation in S&T and enhancing the sharing of scientific knowledge.

Enhancing capacities in science, technology and engineering, including through the promotion of science education at secondary and higher education levels and the participation of women and girls in science and research for development, is of crucial importance in contributing to the advent of sustainable development. Speakers requested the Organization to continue its support towards strengthening Member States’ knowledge base and human capacities in the field of green technologies, in particular renewable energy, as well as in scientific fields such as nano- and biotechnologies, raw material, life sciences. The important role of the “Abdus Salam” International Centre for Theoretical Physics (ICTP) for capacity-building in basic and engineering sciences in developing countries was emphasized.

Social and human sciences

Likewise, the importance of social and human science in addressing the interrelated challenges of today was affirmed. Many Member States noted that empowering youth to become key partners in their society and meeting their expectations is essential to peace and sustainable development. Youth participation, violence prevention and building life skills necessary to facilitate their access to jobs are key issues to be addressed. UNESCO’s role is essential in these endeavors; it must integrate youth more systematically into its work across all its areas of expertise. The organization of a Forum of Youth Ministers was proposed to complement the UNESCO Youth Forum and to ensure that the concerns of youth are taken into account. Human rights were emphasized as the bedrock of peace and empowerment. Several Member States reiterated the need to continue promoting human rights and tolerance for increased participation in society and building democracy.

Several Member States asked for the adoption of an ethical approach to address today’s problems of development and social transformation. The importance of ethics in science was underlined and support for UNESCO’s work in this area expressed. Bioethics was singled out as an important field. Many Member States have affirmed the importance of climate change as one of the key challenges the world currently faces and some supported an ethical approach to this challenge.

Member States also recalled that building inclusive societies is a precondition for achieving sustainable development. Many of them emphasized the need to fight social exclusion and inequality and called on UNESCO to continue its work towards social inclusion through the social and human sciences. Some Member States expressed their support for the Management of Transformations (MOST) Programme and commended its capacity to help promote social integration and cohesion.

The positive role of sports for personal development was mentioned. Some Member States expressed the importance of the UNESCO Convention against Doping in Sport and commended it especially for ensuring the ethical reputation of sports.

Culture

Member States unanimously emphasized the importance of a culture for peace and intercultural dialogue. Knowledge about different cultures and peoples is crucial for fostering dialogue and mutual understanding across countries as well as between and within different communities. Advocating a positive vision of cultural diversity which is conducive to peace is therefore fundamental in the fight against discrimination, prejudice and extremism. Many delegates referred to the promotion of a true culture of peace as an ethical imperative. UNESCO should pursue collaboration with its partners in this area, including with the Alliance of Civilizations. Renewed focus should be on values which promote democratic principles, human rights, freedom and equality between cultures.

Delegates also expressed wide support for and commitment to UNESCO’s action in the field of cultural heritage and in particular the cultural Conventions and their underlying principles, stressing that they are the cornerstones of effective action to promote intercultural dialogue and advancing peace. The Conventions constitute the framework for the protection of cultural resources, which are at the foundation of identities and genuine catalysts of social and economic development. They are also unique tools for furthering social cohesion and inclusiveness as well as for safeguarding and promoting cultural expressions. This is particularly important at a time where rapid changes in social and natural environments impact directly on culture and heritage.

While ratification and effective implementation of the Conventions was called for, the necessity of achieving regional and subregional equity was also highlighted by several delegates, as well as the need for increased efforts in capacity-building and innovative action to assist countries in drawing maximal benefits from the instruments. UNESCO’s responsibility in maintaining credibility, efficiency and impartiality in the implementation of the 1972 Convention was highlighted.

New avenues for reaching out to civil society and especially to youth were also called for by many delegates. Young people must become real stakeholders and agents of the transmission, change and innovation related to culture. Intercultural education is pivotal in furthering intercultural understanding and peace and constitutes an area where UNESCO has a direct responsibility. Greater efforts must be made to mainstream the principles and values underlying cultural diversity into school curricula, also with a view to enhancing employment opportunities.

Delegates commended UNESCO for the encouraging progress obtained with regard to the culture and development agenda. This was viewed as a clear example of the affirmation, by the international community, of culture as an important component of the global effort to achieve the Millennium Development Goals. A majority of speakers expressed strong support for the work carried out by UNESCO in this priority domain, both in terms of advocacy at the global, institutional level, but also through the implementation of concrete and measurably impactful projects, aiming to reduce poverty and enhance social cohesion. Several delegates announced that culture, and in particular cultural heritage, had obtained high priority in public policy and decision-making systems in their countries.

Communication and information

With regard to communication and information, a number of delegates reiterated the importance of promoting freedom of expression, the free flow of information and the development of free, independent and pluralist media as core priorities of UNESCO. The Organization’s role as an advocate of these fundamental freedoms, which are preconditions for development, democracy and dialogue, was highlighted and the work concerning the safety of journalists and the fight against impunity, identified as being crucial in this regard. A special reference was made to the importance of using social media as a vehicle for political and social empowerment and the fostering of democracy.

Many delegates underscored the importance of UNESCO’s work in the digital preservation of the world’s heritage, in particular through the Memory of the World (MoW) programme, which will celebrate its 20th anniversary in 2012. It was emphasized that the digitization of cultural content should be promoted as a means of ensuring universality of content and the reduction of digital divide.

The importance of the Organization’s focus on media development was also recognized by several Member States. The role of the International Programme for the Development of Communication (IPDC) in the capacity-building of media professionals was highlighted given the important role of journalists in fostering democracy. Delegates expressed their hope that the IPDC will continue to benefit from the extrabudgetary resources to match the needs in this field.
A number of delegates expressed their continued interest in the fostering of knowledge societies and their recognition of the transformative role of ICTs and access to information in all aspects of human development. Some delegates highlighted their support for the technological and digital revolution as accelerators of development and social innovation. The importance of ICTs in education was underscored by many Member States.

VII. National Commissions and the Participation Programme

Member States stressed the crucial role of National Commissions, and acknowledged their contribution to the mission of UNESCO. It was further recognized that National Commissions have a critical role in connecting UNESCO with government institutions, the civil society and in making the Organization visible at the country level and also in the many countries where UNESCO does not have field presence.

Therefore Member States urged the Director-General to promote further, closer cooperation with National Commissions by taking advantage of locally available entities and resources, and also suggested using streamlined reporting between field offices and Headquarters.

Member States highlighted the key role of National Commissions in the reform of the field network and several Delegations commended the efforts of the Director-General in efficiently involving National Commissions in the reform process. It was stated several times that this involvement should entail a strong commitment to strengthening National Commissions by providing them with adequate financial resources and, moreover, by building their capacities and improving technical training while also taking into account their diversity.

Further emphasized was the need for information-sharing – the responsibility of both the Secretariat of UNESCO and the Member States – and the importance of establishing new forms of consultation to include National Commissions more efficiently in the definition of the strategies and the activities of the Organization.

The importance of the Participation Programme was underlined, especially in its role as a catalyst for action at local and national levels, and as a concrete tool to ensure UNESCO’s visibility in Member States.

Member States reaffirmed the significance of the Participation Programme not only for developing countries, but also for many others, since it enables National Commissions and NGOs to develop programmes and activities that may not always be the priority of the respective countries, but that are priorities for UNESCO. Therefore several delegations commended the Director-General for her assurance to continue to resource this programme adequately.

VIII. Partnerships

Member States called on UNESCO to seek innovative funding and strategic partnerships. They highlighted the need to improve the overall partnership strategy and partnership cycle, including exit strategies.

It was reminded that the report of the Independent External Evaluation highlights that UNESCO has a large network of partners which has not been fully employed and that as such, steps should be taken to reinforce coordination with and management of partners. These collaborations should be improved by, inter alia, training staff in fundraising and in building partnerships. It was further suggested that UNESCO should learn from other United Nations entities and increase its collaboration across the United Nations system.

Furthermore, Member States urged UNESCO to build on the commitment of existing partners, especially those with direct links to civil society (e.g. UNITWIN, ASPNet), which have the ability to position UNESCO closer to country needs, hence ensure its relevance and impact. They highlighted in particular, the importance of non-governmental organizations for the effective delivery of UNESCO’s activities.

Speakers emphasized the need for enhanced subregional and regional cooperation, including the South-South and North-South cooperation. Some recalled that, in order to achieve the objectives of Priority Africa, it is necessary to mobilize extrabudgetary resources and to develop partnerships with AU/NEPAD to ensure proper implementation of projects on the ground.

Member States affirmed that UNESCO should seek wider and stronger partnerships with the private sector in different regions, including Africa. UNESCO should also carry out strict assessments of its partners so as to ensure their real commitment to the Organization and to guarantee that their activities are in line with the principles of the United Nations Global Compact.
