Sir/Madam,

I have the honour hereby to launch the call to nominate candidates for the 2016 edition of the UNESCO International Literacy Prizes, on the theme “Innovation in Literacy”. Initially established in 1967, these Prizes are currently composed of the two UNESCO King Sejong Literacy Prizes, sponsored by the Republic of Korea, and the three UNESCO Confucius Prizes for Literacy, sponsored by the People’s Republic of China. They are awarded each year to individuals, governments and non-governmental organizations in recognition of their distinguished contribution to the promotion of literacy, and their meritorious efforts in this regard.

The prizewinners shall be designated by UNESCO on the basis of the recommendations of an International Jury, which consists of five independent, eminent professionals. Each prizewinner will receive a monetary award, a silver medal and a diploma, all of which will be presented at an international ceremony that will take place on Thursday, 8 September 2016, in commemoration of International Literacy Day.

It is strongly recommended that nomination files take into consideration this year’s theme, as well as the specific thematic focus of each Prize, which is “Literacy in Multilingual Contexts” for the UNESCO King Sejong Literacy Prize, and “Adults in Rural Areas and Out-of-School Youth, especially Women and Girls” for the UNESCO Confucius Prize for Literacy. The 2016 UNESCO International Literacy Prizes Guide sets forth the rules and procedures to be followed for the submission of entries. A copy of it is enclosed herewith for your perusal.

I am pleased to invite your Government to submit nominations for this year’s edition of the Prizes. In accordance with the Prizes Statutes, each Member State can propose up to three nominations for the UNESCO Confucius Prize for Literacy, and up to two nominations for the UNESCO King Sejong Literacy Prize. To prepare a nominated proposal, your Government may wish to consult your respective National Commission for UNESCO. The deadline for submission of all nomination files is Monday 4 July 2016.
We would appreciate if you could inform any individuals and organizations who may be interested in submitting applications, asking them to complete the enclosed submission form (online version: http://en.unesco.org/themes/literacy/prizes) in English or French. The applications that you would subsequently receive from them and nominate can then be transmitted, preferably electronically, to the UNESCO International Literacy Prizes Secretariat located in the Section of Youth, Literacy and Skills Development of the Division for Policies and Lifelong Learning Systems within the Education Sector. The contact details for the Secretariat can be found hereunder. Publications, videos or other supporting materials of major importance may be submitted by post, also to the Prize Secretariat.

Background

Since 1967, UNESCO has awarded International Literacy Prizes to more than 470 outstanding and innovative projects and initiatives of governments, NGOs and individuals across the world to promote literacy and dynamic literate societies.

Currently, the UNESCO International Literacy Prizes are:

- The UNESCO King Sejong Literacy Prize (1989 – present) supported by the Government of the Republic of Korea to gives special consideration to the development and the use of mother-tongue in learning, education and training.

- The UNESCO Confucius Prize for Literacy (2005 – present) supported by the government of the People’s Republic of China to gives special consideration to literacy for people in rural areas and out-of-school youth, particularly girls and women.

Thematic focus

In 2016, Innovation in Literacy is the overall thematic focus of the UNESCO International Literacy Prizes. This focus reflects the importance of innovation in literacy in rapidly changing societies, economies and environments. Literacy involves a continuum of learning and proficiency levels. It is an integral part of lifelong learning and a wider set of competencies for life, work and sustainable development. The Prizes awarded in 2016 will recognize programmes or projects that demonstrate innovation in literacy in the context of Sustainable Development Goal 4-Education 2030\(^1\) and the Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development as a whole\(^2\).

Innovation often results when ideas are applied to satisfy the needs and expectation of individuals, societies and economies, however it is difficult to measure innovation given its constantly changing nature and environment\(^3\). While there is no universal definition of innovation in education and literacy, several areas of innovation will be considered with reference to the strategic directions for translating the “2030 vision of literacy” into action adopted by UNESCO in 2015\(^4\): (i) equitable access to quality literacy learning opportunities; (ii) approaches to the teaching and learning of literacy; (iii) monitoring and assessment; (iv) partnership including coordination of joint programmes, and sustained inter-sectoral efforts of multiple stakeholders at global, regional, national and sub-national levels; (v) mobilization, diversification and sustainability of funding; and (vi) use of technology in design, delivery and scale-up of literacy programmes.

Application process

Any interested and eligible individuals or organizations are invited to make applications. The process includes two specific stages. In the first stage, an applicant is encouraged to contact the Government of the Member State, via the National Commission for UNESCO, or an International Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) maintaining official relations with UNESCO to submit a completed submission form in English or French.

In the second stage, a Government, through its National Commission, and/or an International NGO which receives one or more submission forms, will send up to three nominations for the UNESCO Confucius Prize for Literacy, and up to two nominations for the UNESCO King Sejong Literacy Prize to the Director-General of UNESCO through the Secretariat of the UNESCO International Literacy Prizes.

Selection Criteria

The Prizewinners are selected by the Director-General of UNESCO on the basis of recommendations made by an International Jury, composed of distinguished experts appointed by UNESCO’s Director-General, which meets in Paris once a year.

The Prizes are awarded, each year, at an official ceremony held for the purpose on the occasion of the International Literacy Day (8 September).

The programme or project will be assessed by the Jury on the basis of the following criteria:

- Relevance and robustness
- Quality of teaching and learning
- Impact
- Innovative features
- Sustainability

In addition to these criteria, the programme or project should contribute to the thematic focus of the Prize for which the candidate is applying.

Eligibility

Institutions, organizations and individuals promoting literacy through effective and innovative projects or programmes.

Eligible programmes or projects should have a proven record of innovative work in the field of literacy for at least three years.

As all applications require a formal nomination letter self-nomination is not accepted.

The programmes/projects which have been awarded the UNESCO International Literacy Prizes in the past five years are not eligible.

Note to applicants

Please complete the form as fully and accurately as possible while respecting the word limits indicated. Answers to all of the questions are not required as some questions may not be relevant for every programme or project. However, all applicants should complete sections marked ‘essential’. The Secretariat of the International Literacy Prizes can be contacted by email: literacyprizes@unesco.org
